Ludendorff Said No
The Pope Foresees Sorrow
Really a Good Offer
A Professor Makes Good

Chancellor Hitler, of Germany, conferred upon the fighting German General Ludendorff the title "Field Marshal-General," highest rank in Germany's army. General Ludendorff, greatest, after Von Hindenburg, in the big war, declined with thanks, announced his retirement to a small hunting lodge in the Bavarian mountains. It is suggested that Germany's most distinguished living general did not feel that his glory could be increased by Chancellor Hitler, who was a corporal in the army of Austria.

Chancellor Hitler could remind General Ludendorff that the "Little Corporal," Napoleon Bonaparte's nickname of affection, created many a marshal. There was, however, a difference between the "Little Corporal" and the Austrian corporal.

While honoring in St. Peter's the first two English saints proclaimed since the Reformation, Sir Thomas More and Bishop John Fisher, Pope Pius appealed to the British to "return to the Father's house," praying that England might return to the Catholic Church, "in unity of faith and of knowledge of the Son of God."

In some "high" Church of England services there is so near an approach to Catholic ritual as to make a distinction difficult for the uninitiated.

The Pope's plea for religious unity was rejected offhand in London by the Rev. W. H. Carnegie, sub-dean of Westminster, who compared the Church of England to a constitutional government and the Catholic Church to the government of Mussolini. The Vatican has proved that it can wait.

Pope Pius, saying "the present times are critical," predicted troublous times ahead for the faithful.

He foresaw, not necessarily "a martyrdom of blood, but a martyrdom of life, obstacles raised against fulfillment of the duties imposed by God and ordered by the church."

In old Weber and Field days, one actor offered $5000 for a dog; the other whispered, "But Mike, you ain't got $5000."

"I know it," said Mike, "but ain't it a good offer?"

A good offer is desirable when it cannot cost anything. Consider Mr. Eugene Daniell, who, according to Universal Service, once ran for President, got 100 votes, and later dropped tear gas bombs in New York's Stock Exchange, driving into the streets brokers, some of whom were shedding their first tears since 1929.

Yesterday, at the corner of Fifth avenue and 42nd street, New York, Mr. Daniell, selling Senator Huey Long's excellent and energetic newspaper, "The American Progress," proclaimed, "Huey Long for President; Father Coughlin for Vice-President." Mr. Daniell offered a five-plank platform:

1—Life, liberty and happiness for everybody.

2—Minimum income of $2500 yearly for everybody.

3—Minimum estate value of $5000 for everybody.

4—Pension of $30 monthly for everybody over 60 years old.

5—Immediate payment of the veterans' bonus.

Not everybody may get everything that is offered, BUT Mr. Daniell made three cents profit on each five cent newspaper, and he sold many.

His cry was, "Buy America's greatest newspaper, owned by the next President of the United States, Huey Long."

Mr. Daniell, Harvard graduate, says he gave up practice of law "to take charge of America's social earthquake," and announces "a great political rally at Beaux Art Hall, 328 East 86th street, Basement Hall in rear of the grill."

One campaign is started.

President Roosevelt may be right about professors. An eight-year-old girl was missing in New York; all police detectives, plus 60 policemen, especially assigned, and troops of Boy Scouts searched the neighborhood vainly, for 61 hours.

Professor Taylor Putney, Jr., of New York University, said to the police, "I saw two boys and girls digging a cave in the sand, late on the day of the girl's disappearance; look there, and pointed. There at the foot of the concrete wall the girl was found, apparently smothered by sand that had caved in. There is much to know but it is no LOCK for what you want to find.

Not discouraged by disaster, Russia's government will build three more giant planes, each as big as the one that crashed, killing 45 men, women and children, because of a "stunting" Russian pilot's stupidity.

Building three new ones to replace the one destroyed is Stalin's idea of "defying destiny."

'NUDIST' CHASE ON WELLESLEY CAMPUS

New C. D. Parker Crash Facts Revealed

BONUS MESSAGE BLOCKED

GIRLS CHEER CAPTURE OF 'NUDE' TRIO

Two police shots during a chase of three scantily clad youths who escaped from the Lyman School in Westboro aroused Wellesley College girls today.

The youths were captured after a chase across the college campus and through adjoining woods while one of the watching girls cheered in the belief the trio were Harvard students on an initiation prank.

All the youths were shoeless. One wore only an abbreviated nightgown and socks, the other two only trousers.

Arrested and returned to the school were John Thomas, 19, of Fitchburg; Theodore McKaro, 20, of Fall River, and John Quinn, 19, of Roxbury, who took "French" leave during the night from the institution and hitch-hiked a ride to Wellesley.

An early-rising Wellesley student glimpsed the three in their strange costumes.

Because swains of Wellesley girls never arrive in such fashion, she notified a faculty member and police were called.

Girls popped their heads from dormitory windows as Sergt. David Gallery and Patrolman John Walsh chased them across the campus and brought them to a halt with two shots fired in the air.

Hitler Plans Pact With Russia

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Berlin, May 21—Widely current, although unverifiable, rumors in political circles today said Reichsfuehrer Hitler's surprise offering in his Reichstag speech tonight will consist of an invitation to Russia to conclude a non-aggression pact.

It also was generally believed Hitler will announce the creation of separate ministries for the army and navy.

As Der Fuehrer completed writing his address, it was reported his words were being transmitted into various languages for international broadcast.

Motion picture houses will begin performances at 6 p. m., instead of the customary 7 p. m., and will interrupt shows at 8 p. m. to tune in on Reichstag proceedings.

Among the issues which observers believe Hitler might discuss were:

International alignments with emphasis on Germany's relations to Poland, Memel, the Rhinelands and France.

Nazidom's world prestige in the light of the Danzig, Czechoslovak, Memel and Saar elections.

The proposed western defensive air accord and the eastern mutual assistance project.

His recent conferences with Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, and Captain Anthony Eden, lord privy seal; the tripartite conversations at Stresa; the Anglo-French accord achieved at London, and prospect for direct negotiations between General Goering and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France.

PARKER FIRM CRASH DATA REVEALED

By JOHN H. NOONAN

The State Department of Public Utilities today surrendered to Attorney General Paul A. Dever the records of its Securities Division relating to the C. D. Parker & Co., Inc.

These records, it was learned, show:

That for a year the securities division failed to detect that the Parker concern, handling money for investors, was $2,000,000 "in the red."

That for a year the division did not even take steps to check the bland statements of this company, which controlled several other concerns, all of them expending swiftly.

That for a year the company's statement that it held securities of a value of $3,000,000 was allowed to stand, whereas the market value was less than a third of that figure.

That no order was issued halting the sale of stock until Bowen Tufts, the moving spirit in the organization, committed suicide.

Upon getting this and other important data Attorney-General Dever immediately called a conference of the receivers of the Parker concern and affiliated companies.

At the same time, Dever was preparing for a public hearing, which takes place tomorrow before the Public Utilities Commission, on the suspension of George A. Foster, investigator for the securities division, alleged to have received money in the Dill & Co. case.

Details of the charges against Foster were obtained today by the Boston Evening American.

Dever assigned an assistant,

Not even the police could make an elderly Somerville man take his medicine today.

From a women living on Broadway police received this:

"My husband is sick. He won't take his medicine. Please send an officer. Maybe he'll take it from him."

Lieutenant Thomas M. Sharry sent Patrolman Alfred McFadden in a squad car.

McFadden's report:

"He wouldn't take his medicine for me either. He took a drink of whiskey and went to bed."

The 21-year-old flier is on his way to Mexico City to bring back as his bride, Elena Rivero, 19, whom he wooed in Spain.

Mexico City, May 21—"My sweetheart is coming! My Hombrecito! Oh! I am so fill with emotion!"

All this jubilation bubbled from 19-year-old Elena Rivero when informed Juan Pombo is flying across the Atlantic on his way to claim her hand.

"We have been sweethearts since our childhood in Santander, Spain," she related.

"When I was leaving for Mexico, two months ago, he said, 'I'll see you in Mexico City, Elenita. I'll fly there.'

"I thought he was just making the joke, but now I see he meant it."

VETO SESSION IS HELD UP BY TWO IN SENATE

By Associated Press

Washington, May 21—As the Capitol heard that President Roosevelt would reject any proposal for full and immediate payment of the bonus, plans for a joint congressional session tomorrow to receive the veto message on the Patman bill were blocked, temporarily at least, by Senators Steiwer (R.), Oregon, and Long (D.), Louisiana.

Steiwer held up action on the resolution to authorize the joint session for almost an hour with a speech denouncing it as unconstitutional and merely a "stage setting."

VETO FOR ANY BONUS

Senator Tydings (D) Maryland, then launched into a lengthy discussion of foreign trade when Long refused to permit an immediate vote on the resolution for a joint session.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, who called up the resolution, contended there was no limitation in the constitution against joint sessions whenever the two Houses chose to have them.

The bonus dispute was complicated further by word in informed circles that the President had expressed determination to reject any proposal for cash payment of the $2,200,000,000.

Meanwhile conflicting claims of strength came from Patman bill leaders after another strategy meeting to canvass votes.

SEES VETO BEATEN

The meeting was attended by Brigadier-General Smedley D. Butler, retired, former Marine Corps commandant, who proposed that if the bill were defeated the veterans should be organized into a political machine, similar to the Grand Army of the Republic following the Civil War.

A positive claim for sufficient votes to override tomorrow's veto came from Senator McCarran (D.) of Nevada.

Senator Thomas (D.), Oklahoma, was non-committal.

DOOM FOR LOTTERY

Curley Sees Rejection by House; Women's Clubs Add Disapproval

Governor Curley predicted today that the state lottery bill would be rejected by the House. He said:

"Public sentiment seems to be against it. It will undoubtedly be rejected."

To Cardinal O'Connell's attack on the measure yesterday, 500 members attending the convention of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs at Swampscott added their support this morning.

They adopted an emergency resolution expressing the belief that a state lottery would be a source of moral or political corruption and an official endorsement of "pernicious principle."

Mention of the bill bobbed up during a House ways and means committee hearing.

While discussing an act calling for the expenditure of $30,000 for the completion of Administration road in Quincy to Granite street in Braintree, Representative Michael Jordan asked Representative Horace E. Cahill of Braintree if he would have the road financed from a state lottery.

"No," replied Cahill. "As much as I want this road, I will not sell my soul for it."

Jane Addams Sinking Fast

By Associated Press

Chicago, May 21—Jane Addams, 75-year-old social worker, who was operated on Saturday for abdominal adhesions, was sinking rapidly, her doctors reported today.

A report issued by Drs. James Britton, Charles Elliott and A. H. Curtis, said:

"Miss Adams is losing ground rapidly. She is conscious at times, but epch weaker."

Miss Addams took a turn for the worse early today, after apparently making satisfactory progress since her operation.

Dr. Britton was summoned to her bedside and called in the other members of the staff attending her. They reported she was in a "less satisfactory" and "critical" condition.

BOSTON DENTISTS SCAN RECORDS FOR VERMONT CLUE

HARVARD EXPERT BELIEVES TEETH WORK DONE HERE

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

Dental clinics here began to search records today in the hope of unearthing from their files a lead to the identities of Vermont's triple murder victims.

The move followed announcement by Dr. Alfred P. Rogers of Harvard Dental School that the brace-work done in the mouth of one of the victims was far from the expensive operation first supposed.

This work, Dr. Rogers declared, could have been done by any high grade dentist and is common in dental clinics.

Dr. T. C. Sullivan of Manchester, N. H., after reading a description of the teeth-straightening devices in the Boston Evening American, wrote as follows:

"I am of the belief that the patient might easily have been one of the many clinic patients who are worked on by students of the Harvard Dental School.

"If it was a private practitioner's patient he would not allow boy to drop out of sight without inquiring as to her whereabouts. If he found the patient missing he would report it at once.

"The Harvard Dental School keeps thorough records of all work on all their patients. By checking these records on all orthodontia patients of the past five years those that did not return to have their appliances removed could be discovered."

DENTIST CLUE SOON

Dr. Rogers said today:

"Our investigation has narrowed down to a comparatively small field and we will keep on until our work is completed. We will in all probability find the man who made the appliance."

Lieutenant-Inspector John A. Dorsey of the Boston police left the city to investigate a report that a New England family of four disappeared two years ago and the mother and two children have not since been seen. The father has been reported remarried in the West.

State's Attorney John T. Conley of Middlebury, Vt., announced he would go to New York to confer with officials.

MADE BRACES

Another search, equally significant and important, was begun by the S. S. White Dental Manufacturing Company of 120 Boylston street, Boston, which made the braces used.

The White company here, and in its Philadelphia and New York offices, started to trace all the dentists to whom the types of braces used in this mystery had been sold.

This, police pointed out, was another element narrowing down the field of concentration, and with a list of such cases in recent months, the investigation will start.

Then it will extend back through the five-year period, a large part of which, authorities assert, the three murders could have taken place.

NEW SHARCH PLANNED

In Middlebury, under Conley's orders, it was being planned to call in the CCC for about 200 men to search the woods near the scene of the burial of the bodies.

This hunt, it was believed, might uncover the .38 caliber murder weapon. Also portions of the victim's clothing, or other clues, might be unearthed.

Sheriff Ralph Sweet of Middlebury expressed surprise that there had not been more response from police regarding missing persons.

Believing it possible the victims were from Canada he sent for missing persons lists from the Royal Canadian Police.

In New York 125 detectives with pictures of the dental work continued their canvass of orthodontists and when these have all been interviewed, they will visit the 7000 ordinary dentists there.

PARKER CRASH REVELATIONS

Henry P. Fielding, to prosecute the case tomorrow at the hearing, doing so on request of Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the public utilities commission.

It is the first time the attorney-general's office has figured in such a hearing.

To Foster has been sent this specification:

"You have been guilty of misconduct in the performance of your duties, in that you have improperly accepted checks payable to you from one Harold L. McCormack, who was at the time an official of Dill & Company, a broker under the provisions of the Sales of securities act."

McCormack now is at state prison, starting a five to ten years term. Dill & Co. is defunct. The public lost $500,000.

Foster is further charged with failing to be frank and candid in stating that he had no knowledge or recollection of checks signed by McCormack and drawn on the Pilgrim Trust Co.

EIGHT CHECKS TRACED

It was learned that the authorities claim to have information that eight checks for $25 to $100 each were cashed against the Dill & Co. account and endorsed by a George Foster, from January, 1933, to January 17, 1935, one month before McCormack disappeared and a fraud order closed his business.

In the Parker Company case, involving two affiliated companies, Dever fears the public has lost "tens of millions."

The records placed in his hands show that the Parker concern was insolvent to the extent of more than $2,000,000 at least a year before the securities division issued its fraud order, 48 hours after Parker suicided.

SURPLUS—OR DEFICIT

Not until February 28, 1935, did Director John C. Hull of the securities division write to Treasurer E. L. Bennett of the Parker concern requesting him to state the book value of securities listed on March 31, 1934, as worth $3,504,253.

With the securities listed at this value, the concern showed a surplus. At their proper market value there was a huge deficit, it is now asserted by officials.

After Hull's first letter there was considerable correspondence between Hull, Bennett and a certified public accountant.

The correspondence shows that Securities Division failed to elicit the desired information. Bennett was informed that under the law he must file it, and should have filed it a year previously.

After Tufts, the controlling genius, committed suicide, officials sliced the $3,500,000 market value figure more than two-thirds.

Dever asked for the records of the Securities Division Saturday after a conference with David Stoneman, attorney for the receiver of the Parker concern.

Today, after receiving the papers, he called Stoneman and the receivers for two Parker affiliates—Thomas H. Mahoney and Arthur E. Bickford—into a conference scheduled for late this afternoon.

The balance sheet of C. D. Parker & Co., Inc., as of March 31, 1934, which the securities division investigated after the lapse of a year, as the company gave it to the state division, was as follows:

ASSETS

Securities on hand	$3,504,253.07
Notes and accounts receivable	2,211,154.07
Deposits in banks	30,617.35
Cash	1,071.93
Furniture and fixtures	5,194.00

Total	$5,769,229.99

Liabilities and capital:

Notes and accounts payable	$2,508,188.57
Due Depositors	2,629,776.11

2500 in New Auto Strike

Cleveland, May 21—Officials of the White Automobile Company closed the plant today as the United Automobile Workers' Federal Union called a strike affecting approximately 2500 employes.

R. F. Black, president of the company, issued a statement, saying:

"At 8 a. m. we were advised that the men would walk out at 10 o'clock.

"Two members of the union committee told the plant that, although the committee was authorized to negotiate with the management, they did not have the authority to prevent the men from walking out."

Black said the union is asking wage increases of 15 and 20 per cent, seniority rights and closed shop.

Before the Dionne quintuplets came along and stole their thunder, the four Norlock quadruplets were just about as famous as anyone could wish. In fact, the only known living four of a kind were the Keys sisters of Oklahoma, who now attend Baylor University. But the Norlock girls go right along, getting older and older, and without public ballyhoo or popular contributions. Last Sunday they were five years old and they celebrated in their Lansing home with four cakes each bearing the requisite number of candles. And were they happy?

RUG PLOT FAILS, TWO ARRESTED

A plot to loot a downtown department store of valuable Oriental rugs was wrecked today by arrest of two men, according to police.

One is said to be an ERA timekeeper, the other an insurance broker. Their names were withheld as they are now listed as suspicious persons only.

The watchman at 2 a. m. saw two men in the store, but they ran from floor to floor and disappeared.

Two hours after the store opened Sergeant Mark Madden and other officers found one man hiding behind dresses in a closet.

He gave a Jamaica Plain address.

According to police he said that the other man offered him a chance of making some easy money. They went to the store 15 minutes before closing time yesterday and hid.

After their encounter with the watchman, they went back into hiding, but the other man sneaked out before the store opened. The second suspect was arrested at his home in Brookline.

KING SOLOMON A POLICEMAN

When Charles "King" Solomon, racket chieftain, was slain two years ago he carried a card of auxiliary membership in the Bergen County (New Jersey) traffic police.

This information was made public today for the first time at the trial of John J. Moore, 42, of Brighton, charged with the murder and robbery of Solomon and being an accessory after both crimes.

The testimony was given by Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, who said the card was in the name of Fred J. Dempsey and signed "P. J. Siccardi Chief of Police, Bergen County."

The card showed one duty of an auxiliary member was to report all traffic accidents.

Moore is on trial before Judge Vincent Brogna and jury.

He tried to climb to safety on a pole in the center of the lot, but the animal, breaking loose its heavy chains, gored him three times with its tusks.

DEBTS PAY-OFF PLAN OFFERED TREASURY

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, May 21 (AP)—Uncle Sam has been offered a new and novel scheme to enable him to pay his bills and discharge his debts—without cost to the national treasury.

The scheme, which has been evolved by a group of Washington "inventors," proposes that the government shall issue self-liquidating, discount certificates instead of new currency or interest-bearing bonds.

These certificates would be issued in small denominations and would be negotiable in ordinary trade, as is cash.

Each time the holder of it passed it on in trade or business, the new holder would accept it at a standard discount.

Its "inventors" say it would work this wise:

IT WORKS THIS WAY

The government would issue a certificate, say of $20.

It would bear a discount rate of 1 per cent.

If a war veteran, for example, used it to pay his bill at the corner store, the grocer would accept it, less the 1 per cent discount or as $19.80.

When the grocer paid the wholesaler, the 1 per cent discount would reduce the certificate to $19.60.

On the back of the certificate would be printed a discount table, showing its value to each new holder.

When the certificate got so low in value that the discount would make troublesome fractions, the last holder would take it to a bank and get its present value in cash.

One of the "inventors" of this new idea in financing is a prominent Washington person who became involved in trouble with the government over his income taxes.

The idea is being patented. It is offered to the government gratis, its prime author hoping that in return for his generosity the government may abate the prison sentence that has been imposed upon him by the courts.

NO FLAW IN SCHEME

Its authors say that the scheme has been seriously studied by the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve system, "without finding a flaw in it," and that it has been called favorably to the attention of President Roosevelt.

They characterize it as "one of the outstanding ideas of the century." They say the government could issue these certificates to its creditors in payments of its bills and by the time they had run around through the channels of trade, their value would be exhausted and the government would have no obligation to meet in redeeming them.

WORLD PARLEY ON RECOVERY, TYDINGS' PLAN

By Associated Press

Washington, May 21—A resolution requesting President Roosevelt to call an international conference in Washington to consider a "common sense" cure for the world depression, including a five-year armament holiday and a lump sum settlement of the war debts, was introduced today by Senator Tydings (D.), Maryland.

He also listed stabilization of currencies by international agreement and revival of world trade through tariff adjustment as subjects for the proposed conference.

In a speech, he said these four questions were "vital for recovery and for the protection of civilization."

As a basis for discussion at the international gathering, he recommended the plan "liquidating world depression" recently advocated by Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago lawyer and authority on world peace.

PROPOSES ARMS STAY

This plan proposes a five-year world armament moratorium and acceptance by the United States of 60 per cent of the $10,000,000,000 war debt principal. After credits are allowed for payments already made, the debtors would pay 12 equal annual instalments.

A similar 60 per cent, 12-year settlement would be made with respect to German payments on her army of occupation and mixed claims awards to the United States, and the plan also would call for cancellation of the $10,000,000,000 of debts owing by the European allies among themselves.

"Let the United States," Tydings said, "propose to the nations to be assembled at Washington a new world policy—a live and let live policy—and dedicate it to the plain people of both hemispheres."

ASKS DEBT PACT

Declaring no one expected the war debts to be paid on the present basis, Tydings said it was time to make a "common sense" settlement and get what we could.

He said the United States alone would save about $300,000,000 a year in regular construction appropriations and the world at large from $5,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000.

He said the "four horsemen" of the World War—war debts, depreciated currency, armaments and embargoes—were "still riding throughout Christendom" and the only leader who could down them was "General Common Sense."

PROBE OF REDS DEMANDED

A searching investigation by a special Senate committee into Communistic activities throughout the state was demanded today by Senator Edward C. Carroll of South Boston. He is the minority leader in the upper branche of the Legislature.

Senator Carroll cited evidences of widespread labor unrest and revealed apparently authentic reports concerning dissemination of subversive propaganda and activities detrimental to American government.

The order reads:

"That the president of the Senate be, and he is hereby authorized to appoint a special committee to be composed of five members for the purpose of conducting an investigation of

"The extent, character and objects of Communistic propaganda activities in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"The difussion within the Commonwealth of subversive propaganda, instigated from foreign countries and attacking the principle of government as guaranteed by our Constitution."

The committee would have power t osummon witnesses and any person defaulting a summons, or refusing testimony, would be held to penalties provided by statute.

Under the ordeer, which was referred to the committee on rules, the committee would report its findings on December 1, this year.

PAY THE BONUS NOW!

To Senator .....
Washington, D. C.

I believe that the World War veterans should be paid their promised bonus NOW.

I believe that the Patman veterans' bonus bill provides the best method of discharging this patriotic obligation.

Both Houses of Congress have passed this bill and its defeat by Executive veto would be most unjust to the defenders of the republic.

I, therefore, appeal to you as my representative in Congress to cast your vote in favor of sustaining the Patman bill and against its veto.

EVA COO'S LIFE WILL IT BE SAVED?

WOMEN JOIN IN BATTLE

By International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, May 21—Now that blond and buxom Eva Coo has lost her last chance of appeal and seems destined to become the fifth woman victim of New York State's electric chair, the usual hullabaloo is being raised to save her.

Those who object to capital punishment altogether and those who believe the electric chair should be used only for the erring male are pressing petitions and pounding pulpits in behalf of the woman who murdered Harry Wright for his insurance.

Women's clubs again are turning to their old fight for the right of their sex to immunity from Sing Sing's chamber of death.

Outcries against the supreme penalty for women have been even more bitter in the past.

When Martha Place, the first woman to die in the electric chair in this state, was executed one morning in March, 1899, the entire nation was shocked.

Violent condemnation was showered on Theodore Roosevelt, who was then governor.

His own legislature accused him of "perpetrating a disgrace on the fair name of New York."

But Roosevelt set a precedent with his calm reply:

"In the commission of a crime a woman is deserving of the same blame in a similar case. I would deal with a woman as with a man—no whit differently."

Mrs. Place had slain her stepdaughter, Mildred, out of jealousy.

Eva Coo

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith rejected the pleas of thousands of women to save Ruth Brown Snyder, and she went to the chair, beautiful Queens Village housewife.

She went to the chair for murdering her husband.

NOT AFRAID TO DIE

Eva Coo now occupies the Snyder cell in the death house of Sing Sing.

Petitions against the execution of Mrs. Mary Farmer in 1909 were met by a cold, judicial refusal from Charles Evans Hughes, now chief justice of the Supreme Court, who was then New York's governor.

Mrs. Farmer was executed in Auburn prison that year.

In spite of these discouraging precedents, Eva Coo is staking her homes on a plea for clemency from Governor Lehman.

"I am not afraid to die, but I think the Governor might save me," she said hopefully.

Will he?

He didn't listen to Mrs. Anna Antonio, the 29-year-old Albany housewife, last year.

He let her go to the chair in spite of sentimental appeals from her children and pressure from many sources.

Arabia Idol's Death Mishap

INQUEST FINDS ON LAWRENCE

By Associated Press

Wool, England, May 21 — A coroner's jury of seven men decided today that "Lawrence of Arabia" met death accidentally.

The verdict was returned after the jurors heard testimony that the victim, Colonel T. E. Lawrence, was dashing along a Dorsetshire country road on his motorcycle at a speed of from 50 to 60 miles an hour before he collided with a butcher boy on a bicycle.

Conflicting testimony concerning a mysterious black automobile which one witness said Lawrence swerved to avoid the collision, enlivened the hearing.

The most poignant moment in the hearing came with the testimony of Captain F. C. Allen, medical corps officer who performed the post mortem.

Doctor's Report

A. W. Lawrence, brother of the dead man, asked the doctor:

"Had his recovery somehow taken place, what would have been his condition mentally?"

"Had he lived," Captain Allen replied, "he would have been unable to speak. He would have lost his memory and been paralyzed."

The physician said his post-mortem disclosed a fissured fracture nine inches long on the head.

The brother later made known that Lawrence's will bequeathed him an estate consisting of approximately $1000, some investments, the little cottage in Moreton and the motorcycle on which he was riding at the time he was fatally injured.

Corporal Ernest Catchpole testified that after Lawrence passed an automobile and then swerved in an unsuccessful attempt to avoid two youths on bicycles.

Asked by the coroner whether there was sufficient room for Lawrence to pass between the automobile, and the cyclist, Catchpole, said:

"There would have been if the motorcyclist had not been going at such speed."

Frank Fletcher, 14, companion of the butcher boy who was injured, testified that he did not see the automobile to which Catchpole referred.

While the inquest was being conducted, Lawrence's body lay in a flag-draped mortuary chapel 200 yards away.

Lawrence's body later was buried with simple ceremony in a tiny plot in the village of Moreton. A brief service was held in a little church which accommodates only 170 persons.

Except for a few black ties, there was no sign of mourning.

Meanwhile, in London, an auction room sold a first edition of Lawrence's "Seven Pillars of Wisdom," printed in 1926, for 260 pounds or about $1300. A few years ago, such copies commanded as high as 600 pounds.

And That's How a Gentleman Died

Girl's Defense Bared

BONNIE HILL

GIRL'S DEFENSE IN CABARET DEATH IN NEW ORLEANS

By Associated Press

New Orleans, May 21—Bonnie Hill, 23-year-old riverfront cabaret girl, faced trial today for stabbing her aristocratic young playboy sweetheart through the heart in a gay French quarter night club.

The girl, in jail since the killing March 22, has steadfastly maintained she struck at her victim, John Irving Pierce, wealthy and socially prominent young writer of Jackson, Miss., "only to frighten him."

Bonnie, who has a long police record, told police the story of her life with Pierce.

She said on March 22 they had made a gay night of it, visiting several night clubs and drinking, finally ending up at the Nut Club. There, she said, they argued, and she drew a long-bladed pocket knife Pierce himself had given her, and lunged at him.

Pierce, she told police, got up, handed her his purse, asked her to pay the check and then fell to the floor dead before horrified patrons.

"And that, gentleman, is how a gentleman died," she said.

She said Pierce had found her in a riverfront cabaret several months before when she was seriously ill because of addiction to narcotics.

He took her into his apartment, nursed her back to health and aided her in fighting the habit, she explained.

DEATH AT DAWN FACES 2 WOMEN

By Universal Service

Havana, May 20—Senora Conchita Valdivisso de Giraud, of the burning black eyes that once won her a beauty crown, and Senora Xiomara O'Halloran de Alonzo, a no less striking blonde, face a court-martial in Matanzas, probably Thursday.

These words of Cuba's Secretary of the Interior will signify how close they stand to the firing squad.

"Women who have the courage to take up arms against Cuba's forces of defense should have the courage to die."

Ten men go on trial with the two women. The 12 were captured May 8 when Cuban soldiers and sailors stormed Fort Morillo, near Matanzas, killed Dr. Antonio Guiteras, former Secretary of the Interior, commanding the radical outlaw garrison, and found the two women fighting shoulder to shoulder with the men defenders.

Resolute Band

Guiteras and his followers were the most resolute band of the small group of Cuban radicals that carry on underground warfare against the government, fighting among other things what they term "American imperialism."

Conchita of the dark eyes that three years ago gave her the title of "Miss Cienfuegos" before she gave up beauty contests to engage in the perilous politics of violence, is in double jeopardy.

For she is charged with complicity in the $300,000 ransom kidnaping of Failo Bonet, Cuban sugar magnate, and under Cuba's new law kidnaping is also punishable by death.

SENORA O'HALLORAN DE ALONZO

SENORA CONCHITA DE GIRAUD

In double jeopardy

In Fort Morillo, on the bodies of Guiteras and his slain lieutenant, Carlos Aponte, authorities state they found more than $100,000 of the ransom money. Jose Mas Hernandez, a Cuban army corporal was also killed in the attack and authorities state it was a bullet from Conchita's rifle that dropped him.

Both women are in their thirties. Conchita is the wife of Rafael Giraud, an extreme leftist, who temporarily took over administration of the American-owned Cuban electric company, during the brief revolutionary interregnum of President Grau San Martin, under whom Guiteras was secretary of the interior.

Giraud is in jail, charged with complicity in the attempted assassination of Pena Bas, former governor of Orients province.

Conchita's brother, Ismael Valdivieso, a bank teller, is under arrest on a charge of passing some of the Bonet ransom bills. He declares he did so unwittingly.

Xiomara's Irish name is a heritage from a roving Irish adventurer who stopped in Cuba to become part of its people. She is Cuban born and speaks only Spanish.

Fish Glad At Honor For Reed

"Harvard indifference"—or maybe its broad-mindedness—cropped out again today."

Few prominent alumni care a rap whether or not a portrait of John Reed, '10, Communist hero, is hung in Adams House.

Even Congressman Hamilton Fish of New York, who has gained national prominence in his fights against Communism, doesn't object.

Congressman Fish was a Harvard classmate of Reed.

Locally an exhaustive survey of prominent grads, including war heroes, lawyers, merchants and bond salesmen, revealed nobody very angry about it.

RAP AT "WASHINGTON"

Roger Cutler, '11, famous oarsman, and a few others don't think much of hanging the portrait, but they aren't going to protest. Cutler said:

"John Reed's status in Russia is so nearly like the status of a lot of our politicians in Washington today that I certainly do not believe his picture should be hung."

This is Congressman Fish's comment:

"It makes a difference who is giving the portrait. I see nothing inappropriate so long as it is hung at the instigation of Jack's friends and not the Communist party."

PALS 25 YEARS AGO

That may be Fish's way of repaying a debt, for Jack Reed, as cheer-leader, led the "long Harvards" for the eleven that Fish captained a quarter-century ago.

The body of Reed, a hero of the Russian Revolution, now lies in the shade of the Kremlin walls.

The committee which obtained permission to hang the picture, from Professor James P. Baxter, 3d, of Adams House, included Heywood Broun and Corliss Lamont, radically minded son of the J. P. Morgan partner.

Barbara's Count 'Loves America'

By Associated Press

New York, May 21—Barbara Hutton and her new husband, Count Haugwitz-Reventlow, arrived from the West today.

In the Fifth avenue apartment of the countess' father, Franklyn Hutton, the newlyweds spoke briefly of their plans for the future.

"Will you live abroad and become a Danish citizen?" the countess was asked.

Count Haugwitz-Reventlow is a member of Danish nobility.

"No, we'll live in America," said Barbara.

"Do you like America well enough to live in it?" the Count was questioned.

"I love it!" replied the Count. He was not so prompt in replying to the next query, which was:

"Will you give up your Danish citizenship to become an American citizen?"

The Count paused and considered, then answered:

"Well, I don't know about that."

The Countess, heiress to five-and-ten-cents store millions, said she and the Count would embark on the liner Bremen May 29 to spend the summer abroad. They will return to the United States in the fall.

The men had put out from the Charles River basin at 5:30 last night, aboard the 22-foot speedboat Honey.

Missing Tax Tokens for Poker Chips

By Associated Press

Seattle, May 21—The good people of Washington State rose in anger when the Legislature imposed a sales tax payable in metal tokens.

Now they are laughing about it. They've cornered the market and are using the tokens for poker chips.

"The round aluminum tokens are cheaper than regular chips," said one pool-hall poker player, "and besides, they don't click."

"The cheapest poker chips sell for around 50 cents a hundred, but for 55 cents you can buy 274 tax tokens. Yeah, we can use 'em."

The people took the tokens out of circulation so fast the tax commission, despairing because it would collect no 2 per cent tax, printed paper tickets instead.

BROTHER FIGHTS BROTHER OVER SHAW RICHES

Hearing on the petition of Theodore L. Shaw of Needham for removal of his brother, Hollis H Shaw of Brookline, as executor and trustee of their mother's million-dollar estate opened today in Dedham probate court.

Shaw charged his brother was unfit for his duties of administration because of shock he suffered recently.

Mrs. Ezabelle P. Shaw of Wellesley left the large estate in trust to her three sons, Theodore Hollis and Arthur, and a daughter, Susan Lee of Wellesley.

Theodore Shaw is the only member of the family contesting the brother's ability as executor and trustee.

Robert Hopkins, counsel for Theodore Shaw, called Hollis Shaw as the first witness, but he was not in court.

He then called Dr. William H. Robbins, Marlboro street physician, who testified he had treated the absent brother for shock on February 6 and regularly since then.

The doctor said Hollis suffered a paralyzed right side because of the shock; that it was difficult for him to speak and that he was obliged to write with his left hand.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Paul Cotter, counsel for the executor, hokever, he stated he believed Hollis Shaw would be able to walk within a month and that his speech would be improved. He testified that the shock had done no damage to the brain.

Dr. Abraham Myerson, neurologist, called as an expert by the petitioner, testified that in his opinion the executor's progress would be very slow and that he would never recover fully.

BONES VICTIM SEEN AS MAN

From a bag of bleached human bones Dr. E. C. Hooten, famous Harvard anthropologist, today "reconstructed" the victim of the Belmont death mystery.

The victim, he said, was probably a man, positively right-handed, of European blood extraction, about 30 to 35 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall.

Dr. Hooten and his assistant, Dr. Carleton Coon of Harvard medical school, examined the dissembled skeleton—perhaps of a murder victim—found Sunday 200 yards from Metropolitan State Hospital.

Dr. Hooten and his assistant said:

"The individual seems to have been of the male sex.

"As to racial characteristic, the individual shows a mixture of north European or central European blood such as is commonly found in American white people.

"The individual was right-handed in that there was a larger development of the left side of the skull."

The false tooth plate found near the bones will be shown to dentists in an attempt to trace the work.

ICKES SAYS PWA WAGE SCALE STANDS

By Associated Press

Washington, May 21—Declining to enter any controversy over reduction of payments to labor and other phases of the $4,000,000,000 work program, Secretary Ickes said today the PWA hourly wage rate would be maintained on PWA projects.

"Every man has a right to a personal opinion," was Ickes' only comment on attacks at the new wage schedule by William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, and Senator McCarran (D.-Nev.).

The wage scale for the $4,000,000,000 program, announced last night, ranges from $19 to $94 a month.

Ickes indicated there might be a change in hours worked on PWA projects.

Ickes indicated he would favor increasing the amounts donated by the federal government toward non-federal PWA projects, as demanded by the United States conference of mayors.

"I expect to prepare a recommendation, which will be general in character, and submit it to the President today," he said.

Asserting "great social unrest" would spring from the wage rates, Green called federation leaders to a session to map a course of action.

"I am very much afraid," Green said, "that great social unrest will result from these widely varying rates. There is certain to be discontent and I would not be surprised if it led even to widespread strikes among relief workers."

In addition to criticizing the zoning method of wage-fixing, Green said the limit of one worker to a family was an unfair restriction.

"I don't believe," he said, "that one worker earning $19 a month should be expected to support a family of four or five."

Huge Savings Here Under Wage Scale

Maximum benefits accruing from President Roosevelt's proposed new PWA wage scale would increase the income of 7000 persons now on city welfare and save Boston $2,912,000 a year.

This estimate was made today by John C. L. Dowling, welfare director, who was elated over the plan announced in Washington.

It is based on a supposition that the distribution of federal funds would favor Boston sufficiently to provide work for 7000 able-bodied persons now working in city departments for welfare wages.

Said Dowling:

"If it goes through as anticipated, it will mean that 7000 persons compelled to accept city relief will go off welfare and onto a higher wage scale in the federal service."

Curley Sees Wage Scale as Flexible

Governor Curley was back on the job today after a visit to New York on family matters.

He did not go, or intend to go, as was reported, to Washington in search of more federal funds for the state.

Discussing President Roosevelt's proposed PWA wage scale, he pointed out that Washington dispatches indicated it is more or less flexible. He said:

"The right of local authorities to determine wage scales in accordance with local wage conditions in the federal works relief bill was necessary to prevent the destruction of wage standards built up through the past 50 years."

AUTO INSURANCE Fight Renewed

Claiming a violation of his constitutional rights, Joseph Porosky of Clinton will seek a court order to force Governor Curley, Registrar Goodwin, and Attorney-General Dever to give him plates for his car without requiring him to obtain insurance.

His action, filed in United States district court, is the fourth such attempt he has made.

FRACAS AT INN PLEA PONDERED

An appeal by John W. McMahon, proprietor of the Metropolitan Inn, Clinton, against the action of the local licensing board in revoking his liquor license after a fracas at the inn on the night of April 23, was today taken under advisement by the ABC Commission.

Three Clinton police officers testified that they were called to the establishment, and that they found a man in a battered condition. They said the man's name was Hurst, who wrestled under the name of Shimkin, and that he charged McMahon was his assailant.

Baghdad, Iraq., May 21 (AP)—An official communique said today a second uprising in the Muntafiq district had been suppressed by the combined efforts of the police and air force.

BOY OR GIRL BABY?

Depends on Diet, Mother's Combustion of Food, Italian Expert Discovers

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Rome, May 21—And now it is Dr. Impo Pichezzi, Italian medical researcher, who claims to have mastered sex determination.

Pending close inspection of his methods and the case histories of 44 husbands and wives who cooperated with him in experiments, scientists are reserving opinion on Dr. Pichezzi's announcement of his 100 per cent success in fulfilling the wishes of the 44 couples.

Five of them wished for girls, the other 39 wanted boys, and Doctor Pichezzi made them happy with male inheritors, he declares.

Dr. Pichezzi said:

"There is nothing very mysterious or bizarre in my theory. The determination of sex depends on two principal factors, the principal one of which is the constitutional condition of the mother.

"It is the glandular system of the mother which, plays the determining role in the determination of sex.

"In women with a torpid glandular system, whose faculty of food assimilation is slow, and possessing abundant reserves of fats, the tendency is to give birth to girls.

"The contrary is true in case of women of intense activity, whose power of organic combustion is fast and complete and who have scarce reserves of fats.

"The problem is simply to modify the constitutional conditions of the would-be mother so as to correct their originary tendencies.

"This can be done by study over a period of months by a competent physician who is acquainted with this latest knowledge."

Dr. Pichezzi's system, while simple in its aspects, cannot be put into effect by a mother without the guidance of a dietitian and embryologist.

HEALTH UNIT Formed at B. U.

President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University today announced the formation of an Advisory Committee on Student Health as another step in the reorganization of the department of physical education.

French Broadcast to Aid San Diego Fair Opening

By Universal Service

San Diego, Cal., May 21—From the coast of France, from Washington, and from all parts of the California Pacific International Exposition grounds will come the day-long radio broadcast which, on May 29, will tell the world that the exposition is open.

Plans announced today by Zack J. Farmer, managing director, call for radio events starting at 11:58 a. m. and continuing through the afternoon and evening.

The first broadcast will be from the French Liner Normandie, outbound from France on her maiden voyage starting that day and elected to emphasize man's achievement. Then the program will switch to the exposition grounds, with broadcasts from the various sections, a symphony concert from the Ford Bowl, and music from the cafe of the world.

President Roosevelt will speak by telephone from Washington at 8 p. m., and his words will be broadcast. He will also give the signal at which two children will throw the switch, turning on the thousands of lights in the exposition grounds in Balboa Park. Following this, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink and massed bands will lead "The Star Spangled Banner," while the crowds, which will have been pouring into the grounds since noon, will join.

QUINCY VOTES FOR MAYOR

Five candidates for Mayor of Quincy today awaited results of the special primary election, expected to turn out 60 per cent of the city's registered voters to choose two nominees for the final polling June 11.

The polls opened at 10 a. m. to close at 8 p. m.

The ousting of Mayor Charles A. Ross for violation of the corrupt practice laws brought about the special elections, for which the campaigns were marked by unusually small expenditures, probably as a result of the findings in the Ross ouster proceedings.

Acting Mayor Leo E. Mullin, president of the city council, is one of the candidates.

CODES DROPPED IN MOVE TO SAVE NRA

By International News Service

Washington, May 21—Fighting a desperate battle to save the NRA, the Administration today was ready to abandon codes for local businesses employing a total of from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 workers.

The House ways and means committee, considering the Senate NRA extension resolution, also considered other elaborate reform plans outlined by Donald R. Richberg, NRA head.

Despite these concessions, Richberg demanded an NRA extension bill which would preserve most of the present powers of NRA over businesses said to affect interstate commerce.

FLAYED BY BORAH

The conflict developing between Senate and House over NRA was emphasized after Senators Nye (R.) of North Dakota and Borah (R.) of Idaho had flayed the NRA demonstration to be held here tomorrow.

Ward Cheney, silk manufacturer and leader of the demonstration, invited Borah and Senator King (D.) of Utah to attend the meeting.

RICHBERG'S PLAN

The administration's proposal's for a "new NRA," as outlined by Richberg, included:

Dropping of 17 codes for local businesses, such as hotels, barber-shops, restaurants. Some of the codes have already been abandoned or modified.

Elaboration of President's order dropping retail codes in towns under 2500 to include other units in small towns and isolated places.

Abandonment of code provisions limiting production or building of new plants, except in emergencies.

Drop enforcement by code authorities and boycotts, using only Federal Trade Commission and courts.

ALYCE, FAMILY PLAN RETURN TO WEST

Fall River, May 21—Alyce Jane McHenry, the girl with the upside down stomach, is going to say goodbye to New England.

Her mother, Mrs. Luella McHenry, made the announcement today. It followed by a few hours the reunion of the McHenry family which came when Alyce Jane's father withdrew his opposition to Mrs. McHenry's petition for guardianship of Alyce Jane.

The decision to leave here put an end to tentative plans of Alyce Jane and her mother which had looked to making their future home somewhere around Boston.

Mrs. McHenry said her husband was planning to return by automobile to his work in Sioux City, Iowa.

She will follow west with Alyce Jane shortly thereafter. Train tickets to their home in Omaha, Neb., have already been purchased, Mrs. McHenry said.

While the McHenrys denied there had been any estrangement existing previously, it was generally believed the meeting here was in the nature of a reunion.

Accompanying McHenry was his other daughter, Alyce Jane's 17-year-old sister, Frances Jean McHenry. She will return west with her mother.

The entire McHenry family went to the movies last night and McHenry spent the night at Mrs. McHenry's temporary home in Mt. Pleasant street. The girls stayed at Truesdale Hospital's nurses' home.

In court at New Bedford yesterday, McHenry withdrew his opposition to Mrs. McHenry being appointed guardian of her daughter's affairs. He said:

"It was a misunderstanding. When I learned that the guardianship meant only in financial affairs, I was no longer opposed."

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The death of Colonel T. E. Lawrence in an English hospital, following a motorcycle crash when he turned out to avoid a youth on a bicycle, ends one of the most amazing careers of modern times.

The book in which it was recorded, Lowell Thomas's "Lawrence of Arabia," is one of the classics of modern biography and adventure.

Robert E. Rogers

It is the story of one of the most daring individualists of this or any other day.

It began, like Cecil Rhodes's story, at Oxford, where a young student convalescing from an accident made himself the master of Arabic, the language, and everything connected with that country.

When the war broke out he managed to get sent to Egypt, where the British high command was planning its moves against Turkey.

Lawrence saw an opportunity to detach the Arabians from their old allegiance to Turkey, now that the young Turks were in charge and the government was merely subordinate to the Germans.

Against the will and without the confidence of his military superiors he penetrated into Arabia, established himself in the confidence of the Arabian leaders, and set about the revolt against Islam, which took the form of that brilliant and unorthodox campaign ending in the capture of Jerusalem and the surrender of Damascus. General Allenby rode into Jerusalem, but Lawrence had been there first.

Then came the great disappointment. Lawrence had promised the Arabians, who recognized him as their uncrowned leader, that the peace conference at Versailles would grant them the liberties and concessions for which they had fought.

Lawrence pleaded that British diplomatists ratify his promises, in which he believed his personal and political honor were involved.

The situation was not unlike that in which Bruce-Lockhart found himself involved in "British Agent."

Lawrence, too, found himself repudiated by his government at the moment when he might have had anything he wanted personally. He might have, without question, had a peerage.

Returns to Fame

Instead—and here comes the almost fantastic individuality of the man—he returned his decorations and honors to the government, disappeared, and presently turned up as Aircraftsman T. E. Shaw, having legally changed his name by deed poll, having served in India and England as an airplane mechanic, unknown to his comrades in the service.

From the British point of view, he was like one of Kipling's gentleman rankers—"the poor little sheep who had lost their way, baa, baa, baa!"—save only that Lawrence had done what he did from the highest motives of honor, not because he thought he was lost, but that the British government was lost to honor and to international decency. And he was tired of being publicized and feted, of interviews and impertinences.

Then comes the part that interests me most. It is so superbly English, so impossible of being duplicated in this country, for instance. A year ago there was published a new translation of the "Odyssey" of Homer by one T. E. Shaw, aircraftsman. It became a sensation.

In nervous, effective, modern English, the Oxford graduate, army colonel, airplane mechanic, had told once more, directly from the ancient Greek of the mythical Homer, the oldest adventure novel in the world, the story of the warrior, traveler and adventurer, the much-enduring and many-minded Odysseus, wisest and craftiest and most daring of the heroes of legend.

The "Odyssey" will have to be Col. Lawrence's literary monument, since, I understand, the manuscript of his account of the Arabian expedition was lost, totally, irretrievably lost, and was never written again.

Nation His Debtor

Just as that other Englishman, traveller, explorer, orientalist, Captain Richard Burton, left us his immortal version of "The Arabian Nights"—the one you are not allowed to take out of public libraries—so Lawrence of Arabia turned to the classics for solace and occupation in his retreat from the world and notoriety.

One wonders whether he was wise or right in what he did. He might have had great military and political position. He might have been the Captain Eden of the present imbroglio.

A man capable of intriguing successfully with his Arabians and organizing his astonishing military effort would have been far more useful to England in the place to which his birth and education and experience and genius entitled him than as an aircraft mechanic, though never so conscientious, or a translator of Homer, though never so brilliant.

But however eccentric an individualist he may personally have been, he was the latest of a long line of Englishmen who, single-handed, did great things for the Empire. He reminds one of Robert Clive, of Cecil Rhodes, and other men who broke out of routine and by taking tremendous chances made England their debtor.

But he would insist on riding a motorcycle at a speed which no human being should attempt.

Beauty Asks $250,000

By Universal Service

New York, May 21—What price beauty?

This was the question put to the Supreme Court jury today as Eileen Wenzel, former Ziegfeld "Follies" beauty, sought to collect $250,000 for her marred loveliness.

She is suing Louis J. Ehret, Jr., of the brewery family, and his mother, Mrs. Madeleine Ehret, charging that injuries received in an automobile accident in 1932 ruined her beauty and her career. The car in which she was riding crashed into a lamp post in Central Park. Ehret was driving.

Once, Eileen claims, she had beauty, charm and "it." Now, she says, she has a jagged scar from the hair-line to her right eyebrow, her left nostril shows the work of a plastic surgeon and she has a scar on her chin.

This "politbureau" actually governs the whole organization. At present the "politbureau" consists of the general secretary, who is also the president of it—Stalin; and the members: Rykoff, Roudzoutak, Ordjanikidze, Boukharin and Tomsky.

Stalin is the general secretary, in whose hands the dictatorial power is concentrated (his real name is Djougashvili). He is a Georgian.

SOVIET LABEL

The so-called Soviet government, which comprises the Soviet of people's commissaries and the central executive committee (Z. T. K.) is nothing but a label employed by the Bolsheviks in order to force relationships with other foreign countries and thus deceive the trustful Europeans.

The members of such institutions are mere puppets in the hands of the "politbureau."

That it is so is obvious from the following. Lunatcharsky, the people's commissary for education, has no right, even in his own department, to undertake anything on his own initiative. He has to submit to all the orders of Comrade Syrtzoff, who is the chief of the department for people's education at the central Communist party.

Officially the minister of education is Lunatcharsky, and one can read the following announcement on the sign at the Tretiensky boulevard No. 6: "Ministry of Education."

In reality all these functions are carried out by Syrtzoff, who has his own office at the Old Square No. 4.

POWER OF PARDON

The following incident is not only well known to me, but it took place under my own eyes.

Comrad Kalinin, the president of the central executive committee, has the power to pardon criminals, according to the Soviet constitution; in fact, he cannot make use of this right.

Comrade Kalinin visited the northern Caucasus as the head of the central committee. It was quite an official visit.

He visited Novotchergassk and Rostoff-on-Don. Whether it was the realization of being far from the center and thus more independent, or whether it was that he had too much vodka, but the fact is that he became very bold; he ventured to pardon several prisoners shut up in Soviet prisons of these two cities.

The "Kraikom" (the district committee of the Communist party) immediately telegraphed to the center, and, as I learned, the words of this telegram were these:

"What are we to do? Should we arrest him, though it would be rather embarrassing for us to do so, but we cannot let him act in this way."

RETURNS TO MOSCOW

The reply came in the evening of the same day: Unfortunately, I did not have an opportunity of seeing it, but as a result Kalinin ended his presidential tour and hurried back to Moscow, where no doubt he was severely reprimanded.

He even had to submit to what is known as "house arrest," during which it was officially given out that he was preparing his speech for the impending session of the executive committee.

In October, 1930, I finished my term in the Solovetsky concentration camp, and was then sentenced to three more years of exile to the north of Archangel.

After a torturous quarantine in K., eight of us exiled ones were let out of the gates of the transporting point. There were three convoys with us, yet we all felt somehow more free, as the gates closed behind us.

The Greek orthodox people made the sign of the cross on their breasts, and took off their hats. We, believers in a living Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, were three, and we also took off our hats, and thanked the Lord in our hearts that He had kept us thus far.

We were put on board a ship going to Archangel, and joyfully we traveled across the white sea, feeling free.

Traveling along the River Dvina to Archangel, we saw on the banks free people working, and we hoped we should soon be free and able to live in human conditions, although in exile. Our hopes were not realized.

As soon as we arrived in Archangel the convoy handed us over to the G. P. U., and as slaves we were sold to the wood factory, "Northern Woods."

Our protests were of no avail.

Generally speaking, there are no free people in Soviet Russia. They are slaves, living contrary to their desires.

MARY PICKFORD

Tears at Cheers

By Associated Press

Seattle, May 21 — The applause and cheers of an enthusiastic theater audience echoed again today in the ears of Mary Pickford.

Miss Pickford's eyes glistened with tears as she was given repeated curtain calls after she had played in "Coquette" before a packed house at the Metropolitan Theater here last night—her first appearance in a full length legitimate stage drama since she acted in David Belasco's "The Good Little Devil."

Her audience refused to leave the theater until she said a few words telling of her happiness at the reception accorded her return to the stage.

WOMEN'S CLUB PICKS LEADERS

The Women's City Club of Boston today announced the election of Mrs. David E. Barr as secretary and Miss Adelaide Meserve as treasurer in the "off-year" balloting at the club's 23d annual meeting.

The election of the president and three vice-presidents will take place tonight at a meeting of the new executive committee.

The following were elected to the executive committee:

Miss Kathryn Newell Adams, Miss Frances G. Curtis, Miss Mary Deane Dexter, Miss Sophie C. Hart, Miss Mabel J. Jones, Miss Alice Lawton and Miss Elizabeth MacFarlane, for three years; Miss Elizabeth Burrage, two years, and Mrs. Ernest E. Deane and Mrs. C. Guy Lane for one year.

OMIT FRILLS

Says Tech Professor

Cincinnati, May 21 (AP)—The federal government should leave off the "frills"—at least for the time being—in its rehousing program, thinks Edwin S. Burdell, professor of sociology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"Tile baths, metal sinks and other frills can well wait for a better day," he told the national conference on planning, in session here today.

No Alimony For Wife Who Spurned $25

Salem, May 20—Judge Edward B. O'Brien in probate court today refused to grant alimony to Mrs. Anna C. Lyon of Batavia street, Boston, because she has a job and no children.

In granting her a divorce from George C. Lyon of Bailey street, Lynn, manager of a chain of drug stores, Judge O'Brien said:

"I do not believe women without children and with jobs are entitled to any support from their ex-husbands."

Mrs. Lyon is a masseuse.

At the trial she said her husband was sending her $10 a week.

"I'd like to get $15," she told Judge O'Brien.

"You wouldn't take $25?" he asked her, crisply.

"No, $15 is enough," she said.

2 FLEET SHIPS

Docked for Repairs

Honolulu, May 21 (AP)—Two destroyers, the Buchanan and Decatur, part of the "Great White Fleet" defending Oahu Island in United States naval maneuvers, were in Pearl Harbor today for minor repairs.

Unofficial sources said there had not been a collision at sea. Neither of the vessels was damaged enough to necessitate dry-docking.

CHINA TO HUNT MISSING PRIEST

As a result of United States government overtures, China today began efforts to determine the fate of Rev. Fr. Harold Bush, of Medford, who vanished in the mountains of Kwantung Province more than two weeks ago.

At Nanking, the foreign office instructed the provincial government to attempt Father Bush's rescue, in the belief he had been detained by bandits.

Representations were made by Nelson T. Johnson, United States minister to China, and Clarence Spiker, United States consul-general at Canton.

Father Bush vanished after leaving his mission station to visit friends in a mountain district infested by roving bands of Chinese bandits.

CLAIRE LUCE
Once Her Pet

New York, May 21—Mischka, a small Indian sun bear, given to the Central Park Zoo by the stage star, Claire Luce, climbed out of his "escape proof" pen and started on a walk toward fifth avenue.

In half an hour's freedom he managed to get a good look and create a bit of excitement before he was thrown two feet short of his goal.

By reversing his field successfully, Mischka eluded a pair of zoo attendants immediately after his departure, and then led a half dozen policemen a merry chase toward the avenue.

Patrolman Eugene Rosenberg suffered a badly clawed right hand for presuming to drop a heavy canvas bag over Mischka upon short acquaintance.

It was an hour before his pursuers, perspiring and weary, finally got him under the bear-catching bag, dumped him into a box and got him back to his cage.

"ALL-BRAN FORMS MAJOR PORTION OF MY BREAKFAST"

Delicious Cereal Relieved His Constipation*

Read Mr. Huyghe's voluntary letter: "After suffering for years, I happened to notice in the grocery a box of ALL-BRAN. I determined to give it a fair trial.

"Today it forms the major portion of my breakfast. I cannot say enough for its effect, as I am a man 58 years of age, at the time in life when one needs just what ALL-BRAN does for you."—Mr. Robt. A. Huyghe, 810 Union St., New Orleans, La.

Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.*

Research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables. How much better to use this gentle food in place of patent medicines.

Freshman Jubilee Is Social Highlight at Harvard

By BETTY ALDEN

DISCUSSIONS OF JUBILEES and royalty have been so much the vogue for the past few weeks that the freshmen class at Harvard is being very modish in planning to have the Freshman Jubilee this week while the word is still on the tip of everyone's tongue . . .

Though the committee cannot guarantee that royal blood flows in the veins of the youthful swains who will rush the debutantes and their sub-debutante sisters at the Jubilee on Thursday evening, mothers may rest assured that daughter will be dancing in the right company as the freshman class at Harvard claims the distinction of having the scions of some of the country's most prominent families on its enrollment and the President's son, John Roosevelt, is a member of the committee . . .

Patronesses

JOHN HAYS GARDINER of Brookline, who heads the committee, says that elaborate decorations are being planned to transform the dining hall of the Harvard Union into a place of frivolous gayety, and that besides dancing from 10 to 3, there will be special entertainment by a troupe of strolling musicians from New York . . .

Renouf Russell, the head usher, will have the assistance of John Senior, Eugene Emerson, C. R. Allen, J. P. Kennedy, C. S. McVeigh, Richard Grandin and David Glueck . . .

Also serving on the usher corps will be John Nesmith, F. Lee H. Wendell, William Glendenning, Robert Uihlein, H. V. Kibrick, Sheldon Ware and Robert Cochrane . . .

Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, Jr., of Hamilton, whose son, George von L. Mayer, 3d, is a member of the committee, is head patroness and included among the other patronesses are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Augustus P. Loring, Jr., Mrs. Frederic Dearborn, Mrs. Arthur B. Brooks, Mrs. E. Marshall Field, Mrs. Robert H. Gardiner, Mrs. Halfdan Lee, Mrs. James B. Conant, Mrs. Stephen Sabine, Mrs. Charles Locke, Mrs. Oscar H. Stearns, Mrs. Frederick G. White, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Jr., of Chicago, Mrs. Albert C. Hanford and Mrs. Albert Stickney of New York . . .

The Jubilee is the largest social function of the freshman year at Harvard so it is quite appropriate that mothers of prominent members of the class should be invited to come long distances to serve as patronesses . . . From out of town patronesses include the names of Mrs. Arthur F. Chase, Mrs. William J. Donovan, Mrs. Frederick Keppel, and Mrs. Albert Stickney, all of New York . . . Mrs. Thomas J. Davis of Cincinnati, Mrs. Arthur Oakes of Oak Park, Illinois, Mrs. George S. Oliver of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. William J. Clothier of Valley Forge, Pa., are other mothers of freshmen who will be here for the party . . .

Returning to Live in America

WHEN MR. AND MRS. DUDLEY FRANCIS WOLF were married last fall, they bid farewell to their friends on this side of the Big Pond, and went to Austria to spend the winter and they planned to make that country their permanent home . . . Now the news precedes their return that they are severing their ties in Austria and are coming back to the land of the free . . . Dudley and his bride, a daughter of Walter Damrosch, will undoubtedly live in Gotham as, since the death of his mother, Mrs. Joseph M. Baldrige, there have been no particular ties to claim him in Boston . . .

The Hamlins, the Almys, the Dover Dabneys, the Medfield Dabneys, and all the other representatives of the smart sporty crowd of Dedham and surrounding towns, will be drawn to the clubhouse of the Norfolk Hunt on Saturday evening for the spring dance at which all the members have so much fun . . .

Though the conversation may center around the interest they all have in common, riding and horses, dancing and frivolous entertainment will be the principal diversion of the evening . . . The George Saltonstall Weats, Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Jr., Walter Channing and the J. Gardner Bradleys are other prominent members of the Norfolk Hunt Club . . .

Miss Eleanor Rantoul, of one of Salem's old distinguished families, and aunt of Lucy Rantoul of Boston, has just returned from a year abroad and is learning how happy her friends are to welcome her back by the checks and double checks on her engagement pad . . .

In yesterday's column we had the name right but the wrong likeness when we mentioned Caroline Hunnewell's presence among the guests at the Spencer-Lang wedding . . . The two Caroline Hunnewells must be accustomed by now to being confused for one another but we would like to state that the picture in our column was a likeness of the James M. Hunnewell Caroline, and it was to the daughter of the Walter Hunnewells that we referred to in the wedding story . . .

Stork Visits Garland Home

THOUGH MR. AND MRS. JAMES B. NOYES of Boston are enjoying the sunshine of the late spring season in historic Italian watering places, they are not forgetful of their envious friends at home, as is attested by the number of brightly colored post cards that mark the wake of their journeys . . . "Greetings from Florence, Italy, from Mr. and Mrs. James B. Noyes" is the message penned on the back of a vividly painted scenic card which has just reached this department . . .

• • •

The stork paid a visit in Marblehead on Sunday and left a baby girl at the household of Mr. and Mrs. David S. Garland, Jr. . . . Mrs. Garland is the former C. Carryl Sargent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sargent of Commonwealth avenue, and a member of the Junior League . . . She and Mr. Garland were married last summer at a quiet ceremony at the summer home of her parents in Marblehead . . .

SUNNY SKIES and smiling faces go hand in hand, and when these three leaders of the younger social crowd of the North Shore get together it is bound to be a jolly event. Miss Burrage and Miss Lawrence are looking forward to participating in the out of town wedding of Nancy Whitman and T. Jefferson Davis, Jr., which will be solemnized on June 19 in the little stone church in Hamilton.

ACE OF CLUBS 'Day Away' Ends Busy Season

UNDER A BLUE SKY and brilliant sun, Ace of Clubs, forever trying something different, staged its annual "Day Away," at the Dedham Country and Polo Club, yesterday.

The welcome that awaited us was real . . . good taste waited on appetite in a hot luncheon that was just right . . . laughter and fun closed a season of genuine accomplishment.

Mrs. Francis T. Jantzen, clad in a smart, hand made, cherry boucele suit ended a successful term as president. A gardenia corsage, worn at her shoulder was a tribute from the members of the club.

Ready to accept her new responsibilities, Mrs. Frederick W. Sheehan, who will guide the club next season, wore a becoming blue leghorn hat with her wool-rose print frock . . . it spelled Paris, but we are not sure.

Dora Day, incoming treasurer, created a sensation in her new roadster . . . Gladys Carew, blended in with the countryside in staunch tweed and brown felt hat . . . Marion McCarthy, dark-eyed and very pretty, chose beige with navy hat.

Very chic in tailored blue wool suit and rakish felt hat, Florence Hurley and sister, Helen, in sea green, entertained a table at bridge. Mrs. Vincent L. Green, a veteran Ace, wore her cocoa flannel suit with a jaunty air . . . her guests were Mrs. Joseph Gargan (Agnes Fitzgerald) . . . Mrs. George Clarkson, in rose flannel and dark brown felt hat . . . and Mrs. George T. Quinn, whose gray wool suit was accented with lipstick red with striped scarf and red felt hat.

Polly McCoole, daughter of the Joseph R. McCooles of Dedham, was dotted in brown and white with brown taffeta revers on a short jacket . . . Polly is still knee deep in journalism.

Miss Alice Fitzpatrick of Newton, a past president of the club, wore smart black and white . . . Mrs. John A. Maguire, the former Beatrice Barry, was also in this popular combination.

Sport Suit

With her usual savoir faire, Mrs. William B. Burke motored over from Hingham . . . a stunning white congo cloth sport suit was topped by a large blue leghorn hat which shaded a pair of deep brown eyes.

Hannah Reardon, from Newton, selected a combination of turquoise blue crepe and brown accessories . . . Mrs. Harry McDonald, very New Yorkish, chose printed chiffon in blue and rose, with large taffeta hat.

A table of invited guests were Mrs. William A. Heffer, of Milton, wearing a blue polka dot sheer with re crepe hat . . . Alice Finnegan, charming of manner, in beige with dark brown hat . . . Mrs. John P. Traenor, Jr., in black sheer, relieved with a maize flower at the bodice . . . and Mrs. Anna Fallon in gay flowered print.

Guests of Mrs. Jantzen included Mrs. H. L. Smith of Newton, in black taffeur, with luxurious fox scarf . . . Mrs. Charles W. Mulcahy of Brookline, in beige wool with rose accents . . . Mrs. Frank T. Burns of Winchester, in brown knitted wool and Mrs Mary Reardon of Boston in navy with large blue hat.

Mrs. Edith Clarke Heads Group

MRS. EDITH WASHBURN CLARKE was elected president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the South End Day Nursery at the meeting held at the Brae Burn Country Club.

Mrs. Frank Raymond Mayerweather of Brookline accepted the office of first vice-president, and Mrs. Harry Wyman Barrett of Newton is second vice-president.

Mrs. George W. Bentley of Chestnut Hill was re-elected recording secretary and Mrs. Herbert W. Jenkins of Brookline is the new corresponding secretary. Mrs. Ralph K. Hyde of Chestnut Hill was elected treasurer.

Marketing with Martha

WITH SUMMER approaching, our interest in jellied consommes increases, for it is an ideal first course for a Spring luncheon or dinner. Consomme which is jellied when refrigerated comes in two flavors—the plain beef consomme and the Spanish style flavored with tomato. Simply chill for two hours before serving. Can also be used as a foundation for jellied salads, for standing at room temperature, the mixture liquefies. Mold in the vegetables, chill thoroughly in individual or one large mold. Sells at 2 for 29c, or $1.70 a dozen, so take advantage of this fact. The mushroom soup of this line of goods contains whole French mushrooms; that is, the small button mushrooms, selling at the same price for a 13-oz. can.

WE ARE SURE that our suggestions for Salads and Hot Breads made in the Cooking School last week, will please your family and friends. I shall be happy to send you a copy, on receipt of a loose 3c stamp, including in same the recipe for Ginger Cheese Muffins and a Potato Salad that is well seasoned and suitably garnished with tomato aspic and stuffed egg.

AT THE PRESENT time it is high style to serve shrimp on toothpicks for appetizers with a bowl of Russian dressing near by. We have discovered some tiny shrimp imported from Norway. No larger than the tip of your little finger. A 3½-oz. can, containing a goodly number sells for 19c.

NOTE TO WIVES! who have difficulty making their husbands mow the lawn. It is such a simple matter if the tool is properly sharpened. Invest in one of the carborundum sharpeners, which will have the mower ready in one minute, to work smoothly and quickly. Buy the sharpener according to the length of the cutter on the lawn mower. A 14-inch sharpener sells for 49c. The 16-inch for 55c.

THERE IS A SALE of red caviar at a nearby shop. As you know, red caviar, although fine flavored, is less expensive than the black, and if you feel you cannot afford the other but like to serve it, the red is selling at a very special price this week—4-oz. glass jar for 30c, or 2 for 50c.

HERE IS an excellent piece of equipment that will do four jobs at one time or another. Made of a fine aluminum. Consists of a 3-quart saucepan. Another 2-quart casserole fits into this saucepan to make a double boiler. The 2-quart casserole is attractively designed, with handles on the sides and can be used as a baking dish. Also included is a poacher for cooking three eggs. Now selling for $1.98, regularly around $2.50.

THE PAPER CURTAINS, about which we told you a few weeks ago, caused such a furore, we hasten to tell you about the paper dish cloths, one among many wonders. They are soft and pliable, and much easier to handle than cloth. Since they do not absorb dirt, they can be rinsed easily after using them. No lint. Can be used indefinitely. Package of three, 15c.

A NEW PRODUCT on the market which keeps moisture from lockers and closets, and thus prevents dampness and mildew, will be welcomed by harried housewives who find unsettling. Particularly handy for the Summer house, whether it be at the beach or the country. Enough to last the season through. Sells for $1.50.

IF YOU ALWAYS have envied the window washer doing his job as efficiently as he does, with the use of the rubber gadgets which wipe the window and leave no streaks, you need no longer! With two packages of soap powder, selling for 21c, is given a handy gadget for cleaning windows the professional way.

HERE'S GOOD LUCK for those who prefer a packaged lemon pie filling. A well known brand, usually 10c a package, is selling at 3 for 23c this week. Stock up on this convenient item, for future supply.

IT WILL BE a pleasure to send you information on one or all the above items, if you will send the column clipped and checked, with your name and address written clearly, and a loose 3c stamp for prompt reply. Or, telephone Martha Lee, at Liberty 4000.

Tempting Menus for Spring

By MARTHA LEE

Spring is the time for various kinds of get-togethers. The time is drawing near for school banquets; clubs are having the final fling of the year, and we have received so many requests asking for recipes other than meat loaves or beans to serve on these occasions.

Find a suitable menu worthy of the occasion. Plan simple food, particularly the main course, but have the garnishes attractive. Choose desserts and salads that can be made the day before, for nonsense! Even with these limited quantity menus we run into difficulties with equipment and other working conditions. Sometimes the difficulty is the money that is allowed for buying the food and the menus must be planned with care.

SUPPER MENU

Shrimp Newburg in Bread Cases
Jellied Lime Salad with Cucumber
Hot Rolls
Olives Radishes
Strawberry Shortcake
Coffee

This recipe can be prepared more inexpensively by using tuna fish in place of the shrimps and make it as a chicken a la king with green pepper and pimiento added to it. The tomato jellied aspic could be substituted for the jellied lime salad.

Broiled Pineapple and Strawberry Cocktail with Cheese Wafers
Baked Ham with Barbecue Sauce
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Buttered Green Beans
Sunset Salad
Sweet Butter
Chocolate Ice Cream Puff with Chocolate Sauce
Wafers Coffee

Four Cubes and Melon Balls in Grenadine
Grilled Chicken or Salmon Loaf
Sartiend Pineapple
Baked Tomato Halves
Celery Radishes Olives
Apricot Bavarian Cream
Coffee

To serve coffee for 30 people you need one and one-half pounds of coffee, 1½ quarts of coffee cream and one pound of loaf sugar. In serving rolls, allow about 1½ to a person. Two quarts of olives or pickles will be sufficient to serve 30. One quart of mayonnaise is sufficient, allowing one tablespoon to a person.

BAKED HAM WITH BARBECUE SAUCE (Serves 50)

Soak two 10-pound hams for 3 or 4 hours or overnight in warm water to extract salt. Drain. Add fresh water and boil slowly until tender, about 3¼ or 4 hours. Remove from water, skin and place in roasting pan. Cover with barbecue sauce and bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) until thoroughly cooked (1½ to 2 hours), basting constantly with the sauce.

Barbecue Sauce
2 large onions
2 cloves garlic
1 cup tomato ketchup
1 cup Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon pepper
1 16-ounce can cream of tomato soup
1 cup vinegar
3 tablespoons sugar

Chop onion and garlic very finely. Add ketchup, Worcestershire sauce, pepper, tomato soup, vinegar, sugar and sugar and pour over hams.

APRICOT BAVARIAN (Serves 50)
½ cup gelatine
2 cups cold water
1 No. 2½ cans apricots
2½ cups sugar
14 egg yolks (slightly beaten)
¼ cup lemon juice
14 egg whites
2½ cups cream, whipped

Soften gelatine in cold water. Press apricots through sieve add sugar and egg yolks and cook in double boiler until just creamy, stirring constantly. Add gelatine and stir until dissolved. Cool. Add lemon juice. Add stiffly-beaten egg whites and cream, whipped. Pour into individual wet molds and chill. Unmold and garnish with whipped cream and a mint cherry.

Listen World!

By Eisie Robinson

Keep Faith With the Gang

Robert Service knew a great deal about desolate lands and lonely men. He knew the dreadful grey silt of indifference that can gather within a solitary soul until all hope and pride and joy are choked.

Eisie Robinson

Prospectors, following forgotten trails, miners marooned for long, silent months by the big snows, women starling from cabin windows at a hundred empty miles—he was their spokesman.

Into the mouth of a marooned telegraph operator in Alaska he put these words:

"I will not wash my face,
I will not brush my hair,
I "pig" around the place
There's nobody to care.
I feel as if I was
The only living thing
On all this blighted earth;
And so I frown and shrink
And crouching by my hearth
I hear the thoughts I think."

MANY KNEW IT

There is terrible human misery in those words—and one does not need to be a telegraph operator in Alaska to know that misery.

Many a lonely little city stenog knows it, going home to her lonely niche night after night, looking with hungry eyes at laughing friendly faces which have no eyes for her.

Many a weary wife and mother knows it, marooned within the four walls of her home, watching enviously the girls who pass so gaily on their way to matinees or office.

Many a discouraged man, plugging away between his bench or desk or hall bedroom knows it and gradually lets slip the interests which bind him to life.

YOU, too, have known it, haven't you, Pal? Lost your grip. Felt all ambitions and curiosity and interest fade out of you. Slumped.

WHEN LIFE LETS DOWN

Queer thing that slump. Big tragedies rarely cause it. Most of us are pretty good sports in the face of real hard knocks.

Something in us gets up and fights when there's anything worth fighting for.

But when life lets down—when the ever-wasting, unmeaned of things seeps over us in a slimy gray tide—when one day is just like the day before and there's nothing to hope for or hustle for —then our souls turn to chunks of cold tallow.

I know. I've been there. So have you.

There's only one thing that can pull us out of a slump like that. Sermons and scoldings won't do it—nor will the tedious flutterings of our loved ones accomplish it.

But there's one thing that will sting us into action—that will make us wash our ears and file our nails and stiffen the old spine—and that's the thought that we're part of a big show and that we mustn't break faith with the gang.

The next time you slump, think of that.

Your individual life may seem about as valuable as a plugged nickel, but if you'll stop looking at it as an individual life and think of it as a unit in a great battle—if you'll try to remember that you're keeping the faith for those who have died and for those who are yet to come—something will suddenly take fire in you and you'll live again.

Budget Cottons Will Help Make Vacation Days an Unforgettable Lark

CREAM-IN-COFFEE linen accented with a burning tangerine, for active or spectator sports. Back and front of bodice exactly alike: May be buttoned up, as shown, or opened to show tangerine-faced revers and a V-neck-line, low or high, back or front! Under six dollars. Miss Jane Locke of Beacon street and Wilton, N. H., models all vacation frocks on this page. For shopping details, see story below.

ABOVE, Miss Jane Locke models a plaid seersucker dance frock, topped by a frothy, white organdy coat. Blue and gold placed on a white ground seersucker.

A flattering square collar and flowers of white organdy stay with the frock when the coat is removed. Around ten dollars, including coat.

RIGHT, jungle-bright Guatemalan colors, string and navy stripe the blouse of this cotton crash outfit (looks like linen, but refuses to wrinkle as badly). A navy ascot, navy belt and navy skirt with a slit highlight the blouse's navy stripe. Cleverly, the same colors are repeated in the cotton laced espadrilles, with leather soles and heels, perfect for beach wear. Two-piece suit around four dollars, sandals under two. See last column, upper right, for shopping details.

Seersucker, Cotton Crash In Smart New Models

By ANNICE BRINK

Fashion Editor.

MISS JANE S. LOCKE, post-debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Locke of Boston and Wilton, N. H., lends us her nut-brown young charm in showing a group of inexpensive cotton frocks that might easily comprise the greater part of one's summer vacation wardrobe.

They are all utterly practical, whether you go to mountains or lake country, and trust them to a laundress who uses clay-well water, whether you go in for a sea-breeze holiday, ashore or afloat, and know not how or where they're laundered, or whether you like to save cleaner's bills and swish your frocks into suds and whisk an iron over them with your own fair hands . . . they'll come up smiling, whatever!

Have you seen anything so fetching for so little money as the evening ensemble on the left? The swagger white organdy coat with its tremendous sleeves can do nicely with every other dance frock you own—be it print crepe chiffon, lace or gingham.

* * *

For a really luscious looking, though tailory, sports thing, the linen on the upper right, is a find. There's fun in the stance of those pockets and the cherry-jelly buttons. Add a small, tight sports hat, and you're ready for anything from race day (yacht or horse) to tea in some old ship captain's inn right on the dunes. The canvas Tryolean flats, rubber soled, are good for tennis and the beach. Change into lighter sandals and a rough-straw cartwheel, and you're ready for slightly more formal daytime doings at any resort.

If your coloring is vivid, or you are a blonde who goes brilliant under the summer sun, the new Guatemalan colors, primitive, rich reds, greens, oranges, yellows, will be your choice. They're newest and smartest. And are used from chin to toes in the lower-center sports outfit.

Correct Form of Name For Divorcee

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I would like to know the correct way to address a letter to a divorced woman?

Miss Lillian Williams is divorced from Robert Smith. Please tell me how to address her? I have asked at least ten people, and nobody is sure about it! READER.

The correct form of name for a divorcee to adopt is the surname of her maiden name prefixed to the surname of her married name. That is, in this case, the use of the name Mrs. Williams Smith.

Let me explain why this is the best form. In the first place, it is not correct for a married woman, a widow, or a divorced woman to use her first name with Mrs. in her formal name.

The formal name of a married woman is Mrs. Robert Smith. The formal name of a widow is also Mrs. Robert Smith. And the formal name of a divorced woman is Mrs. Williams Smith.

For any of these women to use, for her formal name (that is, the name she would use on her visiting cards, the name we would use on envelopes addressed to her), the name Mrs. Lillian Smith, is extremely bad taste. It just shouldn't be done.

So many women, when they are divorced, immediately adopt their names with the first names after the Mrs.—Mrs. Lillian Smith. This is incorrect.

The form of name that is thoroughly dignified and correct for them to use is a form that will dignifiedly indicate that they are divorced.

The use of the surname of the maiden name with the surname of the married name does this . . . Mrs. Williams Smith.

If a divorcee feels that she just must indicate her first name in some way (although she should not feel this way), then her only recourse is to use the initial: Mrs. L. Williams Smith.

Answers TO BEAUTY Queries

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

Question: Does a good eye cream help to prevent wrinkles from forming around the eyes? If so, will you please tell me the name of a good cream for this purpose. Also, please state the proper way of applying it.

Betty, Arlington.

Answer: It is most important that the fleshy settings about the eyes be kept firm and smooth. Turkey-tracks are no help. If every girl of 20 would begin a nightly practice of lubricating the lids and surrounding territory, the chances are she's never have a crow's foot to worry over. When applying an eye cream, use the flattened finger tip. Smooth gently out toward the temple. Follow with a light tapping. Be careful not to force the flesh into rolls. Trade names cannot be mentioned here, so write to me again for the name of a new and exceptional eye-wrinkle cream.

Question: My husband's hair has been falling out rapidly until a few weeks ago. He tried the stimulus hair tonic which you recommended and it has done wonders for his scalp. What I want to know now is the correct way of brushing the hair. Is there a particular method for brushing thin hair?

Mrs. G. E. S., Back Bay.

Answer: Yes, and here is a hint to the man whose crown is thinning. Don't brush hair vigorously and violent at the temples. Hair grows out from the scalp on a slant each one slanting away from the crown of the head. When hair is brushed away from the forehead its hold is weakened and little young fuzzers are destroyed. Groom from the crown toward the sides and the front. Then put the hair in order with a comb.

OF COURSE you're proud of your boy . . . so help make him solid and strong—give him plenty of Hathaway's Bread! According to diets worked out by experts, children from six to nine need 5½ slices of bread a day. Between ten and fourteen they need 7 slices a day.

You know your boy is getting plenty of nourishment when you give him Hathaway's Bread. Every ingredient in it is equal in fineness and purity and richness to anything you'd use in your own kitchen. Hathaway's Bread is easily digested, fine-textured, tender-crusted . . . and children love it! It's baked twice daily and rushed fresh from our ovens, already sliced to save you bother.

If you want your boy to be a young husky, keep him up to his proper weight, as shown on the CHART AT RIGHT ABOVE. See that he gets his full quota of nourishing, body-building Hathaway's Bread every day!

HATHAWAY'S BREAD

Josephine Culbertson on Bridge

Brilliant Bidding

When a bridge player makes a very good bid, he quite naturally experiences a self-satisfied glow—as should anyone who has done something well.

For some mysterious reason, he is not nearly so well pleased with himself when he finds other players have made the same bid.

Even though such a fact in no way detracts from the praise which is his due.

A peculiar hand, calling for really brilliant treatment, occurred in a duplicate game at Crockford's, New York's temple of Bridge, last week.

After the game three different players mentioned to me that they had made a fine bid on the deal which I shall give below.

I offered the expected commendation, and then observed others had done the same thing. Each of the narrators seemed somewhat disappointed.

For my part, I was well pleased to find so much evidence of skillful bidding.

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J 8 6 2 ♡ A 5 4 3 ◇ K 10 8 ♣ 6 5
♠ K 7 5 4 ♡ K 6 2 ◇ A 9 7 3 ♣ 7 2	North West East South	♠ A Q 10 ♡ J 10 9 8 7 ◇ Q J 4 2 ♣ 9
	♠ 9 3 ♡ Q ◇ 6 5 ♣ A K Q J 10 5 4 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♣ (1)	Pass	1 N T
Pass (2)	2 N T (3)	Pass	3 N T (4)
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) With such a strong suit, the two and one-half honor-trick minimum for opening bids should be slightly lowered, especially when second hand.

(2) This is a good hand, and offers a temptation to overcall; but at the range of two the risk is too great. The hand may be doubled and set four tricks—1300 points.

(3) This is the good bid of which I spoke before. While highly unorthodox, it is not a bad gamble. North may possibly have stoppers in the other three suits, yet be too weak to make another bid if South bids only two clubs.

A jump rebid of three clubs is not justified without four honor-tricks or more.

When South bids two notrump he knows, if a notrump contract should be doubled, he can always rescue his side in clubs; if not doubled, the possible penalties are not so great and the game is worth a try.

(4) With three suits stopped, and an Ace and a King, North has no hesitation in proceeding to a game contract. Even without so much strength he could bid three notrump after being raised.

The play was simple; East opened the Jack of hearts, and all North had to do was to win the Ace and run off eight more tricks in clubs, making nine tricks in all.

As the cards lay, no opening lead could have stopped three notrump.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Strive for Peace Of Mind If Husband Philanders

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The baby is ten months old, and I have been married a little over two years. It was love at first sight with us both. I was 18, he was 25.

Before we were married I heard things about him, how foolish he was over women, things like that.

We hadn't been married a year before he began to run around with every girl in the place. I had no mother to go home to, because both my parents are dead, and I could not leave before the baby was born.

At last in despair I went to his mother. She's all for him and says it's the fault of the girls. I'm so ashamed, Miss Fairfax, to have a husband who is every girl's property!

JUST CAN'T UNDERSTAND

A man who is the victim of every skirt which flutters across his path is usually a weak character, and one that is pretty hard to do anything with. A wife might condone an overwhelming love on the part of her husband, but a man who turns toward every girl, like a weather-vane, is hard to excuse.

It is foolish to let this type of man destroy your peace of mind and consume your heart like so much acid. You have your baby to live for, and a baby goes a long way toward filling a woman's heart. Make friends, seek interests through your church.

A lot of good old-fashioned contentment will come from doing little kindnesses for the less fortunate. You have only one child; can't you help some neighbor who has several; by taking one of them out when you take your own baby out for an airing? Go to a good show sometime with another girl. Don't nag. Try for the inner serenity which is within the grasp of us all.

What Kind of a Girl Do Men Like Best?

GIRLS, everywhere, dark and fair, spend a great deal of their wide-awake hours wondering how they can make themselves more charming—to MEN. "What kind of girl do the men like best?" "What quality in a girl appeals most to men?" "What sort of girl amuses a man and what is the type he wants to marry?" You hear it everywhere, you see it in the manner and glances of girls that sail past.

They worry about it and write about it. Perhaps Eve with her long hair and not much else besides to clothe her figure that sprang fully-grown into the world, wondered too, how to be most charming to the one man in the world. Literally the ONE man.

It's natural and amusing. But it would be a happier thing for a girl, and girls, to try for their charm for the benefit of the rest of the world and not for men alone. Be as sweet, as wholesome, as pleasing, as accomplished, as smart, as dashing, as sparkling as you can make it. "Make up"—or don't "make up." And then, if men in general, or the ONE man falls in love with the result, that's fine. And if he doesn't, that's all right, too.

Creamy LOTION For Body RUB

By Juliet Shelby

IS THERE anything more satisfying than to have some person compliment you on your beautiful back?

When this happens, you can rest assured that your posture is correct and your diet is about right.

You girls with dry skin have still another back problem. You must see that it is cleansed and lubricated with creams, just as you cleanse and lubricate your face and neck. Skin without sufficient lubrication appears bumpy and reddened—and what could be less beautiful when you are dressed in evening clothes or in beach wear?

Kay Francis, who has been called the most natural beauty of the films, believes very strongly in body massage. From head to toe, at least three times a week, she is massaged with rich lotions or creams. Consequently, her back is smooth and lovely.

Recently a prominent Fifth avenue salon, taking up this question, concocted a preparation that women could massage thoroughly into the skin after a bath or shower without worrying about hose and girdle sticking to them afterward. And at last this innovation has reached your cosmetic counter.

It is a rich, creamy lotion that penetrates deeply and keeps the skin soft while it protects from exposure. It is a grand preparation to soothe, soften and smooth chapped arms and legs, chafed skin, nubby elbows, goose-pimply arms and rough scaly backs. And it will be a joy to the woman who lives in a hard water district.

If you would like the name and place of purchase of this special body lotion, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, or call her at Liberty 4000.

BOYS REVEAL HUNT FOR KILLER

CHAPTER 350

"Why was Rod holding his hand over your mouth?" I asked Junior, almost perfunctorily, for I was so bewildered at this tale of the two small boys and their post-midnight excursion that I felt equal to mechanical queries only.

"It was this way," Roderick struck in briskly, patently eager to exculpate himself from a possible charge of eavesdropping. "I don't know what woke me up—I don't think it was the light going on, for my head was covered up so I couldn't see it very well—and the first thing I heard was Hank and Bill talking.

CLUE TO KILLERS

"So," he went on, "I put my hand over Jun's mouth so he wouldn't yell, and then I punched him to wake him up, for I didn't know what second we might have to beat it out of there. That was what I planned—to sneak out the second we got a good chance."

"And then," Junior here took up the saga, "they said sumpin' that made us want to stay right there and listen all we could. I'll bet you would, too, if you had been in our place."

"Tell me the reason you thought you ought to stay," I asked gently.

"Why, Hank and Bill said they thought they had a line on the men that tried to kill dad, and they were going to follow it up if it took 'em clear to China. That's what they said. And I thought if Bill and Hank felt that way, and they're only his nephews, why I'm his son, and it's more than just a nephew, he's sort of dad's son, too, and we ought to be right to be finding the show thanks, too."

I drew my small son and my nephew closer and spoke a bit huskily.

"I understand just how you felt, and I am not blaming you for listening. You could not help that under the circumstances, and you didn't intend to eavesdrop; it was really forced upon you. Go on with your story."

"Well" Junior drew a long breath, "We couldn't understand all they were talking about—it seems they'd overheard some talking that hadn't meant anything to 'em at the time; they thought it was somebody giving orders about his laundry. But after those men tried to kill dad, then they remembered what they'd heard, and Hank said they put two and two together and made five, which I guess was just their way of joking."

"It's an expression of theirs," I explained as Junior halted.

PLAYING POSSUM

"Yes, I guess so," he assented perfunctorily. "Anyway, we heard them planning to get up just before daylight, take Jim's wheel and another one and go off to the place where the shots came from, where they said they were pretty sure of getting onto somepin'.

"They set the alarm clock after that, and went to bed. They put out the light, but it was a long time after that before we dared do more than poke our heads from under those covers."

"I'll say it was," Roderick struck in. "We heard 'em snoring, both of 'em before we dared make a sound. Then we took off the covers and hunched often that we could an inch at a time. Then we beat it upstairs to the room often the nursery, slipped into bed and waited until we were sure everybody was asleep before we began to talk."

Big Post for Stephen

CHAPTER 23

(This is a serialization of the Cosmopolitan production soon to be released by Warner Brothers.)

Well, she had the coolie from the office, and he had a friend who would cook dinner. She could get the boss's boy to serve tonight. She mustn't let Stephen down.

At five o'clock the house was clean and fresh as soap and water could make it. But Hester's brows drew together in concern when she thought of the dinner. The cook did not promise too well. She, herself, had made the mayonnaise for the salad.

She was a little fearful that it had curdled. It was all right so long as she stirred it, but when she left it—Still, she had charged the cook to beat it the very last minute.

She was ready now to join the others at the office. They were all going to the station to meet the director's train.

Darkness had settled over the station, the wind going with the daylight.

At last the toot of the engine, the train grinding to a stop, the boss going forward with that characteristic shake of his shoulders, the coolies' lanterns thrust forward and up.

For a moment Hester envisioned New York, city of the successful, as she glimpsed a perfectly attired masculine figure, absorbed in helping a woman alight from the train.

And such a woman! Hester, at Stephen's side, gave a gasp, almost a sob.

"I'm a frump beside her."

The moment of appraisal before the two groups mingled was over. Toward Stephen and Hester Jim led a short stocky man with a large paunch, over which a watch chain gleamed.

He was the Shanghai manager whom they all feared.

"Mr. Cobb, this is Stephen Chase and his wife."

"So you're Chase and you're married?" he was saying to Stephen.

"Yes, sir," answered Stephen, looking him straight in the eye. "I suppose it's congratulations."

"Yes, sir," said Stephen again. "Well, you got 'em!" pronounced the Shanghai manager and turned on his heel, leaving them oddly disconcerted.

Then Director Swaley pushed past Cobb's heavy figure, ignoring the boss and Jim, and came toward them, shaking Stephen's hand, giving Hester's gloved one a pat.

Again the brown road, the line of rickshas, longer now, the lanterns hanging from the shafts, the pullers' legs twinkling in the light.

Just ahead of Hester, the director's wife nestled coolly in her fur coat and two rugs. Hester drew her feet under her for warmth, vainly trying to fasten her mind on her duties as hostess.

The alley, the path, the rickshas zigzagging their slow approach, and then the houseboy flung wide and a glare of light almost blinding them.

On tables, along both sides of the hall, were rows of the Company's little lamps. And there, in a purple silk gown and short, sleeveless, filigreed black silk top-garment, stood Kin.

Angry With Kin

Between anger and relief, Hester entered the house. Stephen was angry, too, but not over Kin's return. Over his officiousness, as he termed it.

Confound Kin! He was sure it was Kin who had put the lamps there. Would the director think he was trying to call attention to them?

After dinner, when the boss and the manager from Shanghai had gone, the four sat for a time with their chairs drawn close around the open fire, a nicely molded structure beginning to turn to ash.

"How unusual to have such service here in the wilderness," said the director's wife. "Your boy would grace a diplomat's table. What culture these people have! How much more poise that boy of yours has than we have, for instance. I simply adore their culture. No wonder sometimes they are a little rude to us."

Stephen was fidgeting. He always hated conversation like this.

What right has the director's wife to talk so glibly? He got up hastily, and passed the cigars to the director.

Hester, seeing Stephen's look of irritation, knowing that because of his growing lack of social awareness, he was apt to break out and show scorn of Mrs. Swaley's opinions, hurriedly said the first thing that came into her head. "Do take one, Stephen got them especially for you."

The director laughed, a mellow warm laugh. How naïve, how unworldly was this couple.

Telling him the cigars were especially for him. Or was there more to it? Those two rows of the company's lamps down the hall. Was the young fellow trying to remind him of his part in those lamps? More designing, perhaps, than he thought. Aloud he said:

Gets His Chance

"My dear young woman. Of course I'll take one of your Stephen's cigars. He's a fine fellow. I'm going to give him a chance to show what he's made of. Mustn't let us old fellows have all the plums."

Inwardly, he congratulated himself on his penetration.

The director's party left next day at noon; the valet, the private secretary, the Shanghai manager, Director Swaley and his wife. A shortened line of rickshas returned from the station. Elation and trouble sat on Stephen's brow.

"Hester," he began, as soon as they were alone, 'I've got my chance."

"Not really!" cried Hester.

"Yes, but I'm afraid it's going to be hard on you. Shall you mind? I'm to open one of the new substations. We shan't be in a white man's town, as we are here. But if I make good, the director says—"

It was only after he had gone that there came back to her that first impression of the Company.

Late that afternoon, the boss called Stephen into his office.

"It's all against my recommendation," he burst out. "I advised them to send you to Harbin. Pretty big substation, but you're up to it. I didn't tell them so, but there'd be music in Harbin for that wife of yours. Russians always have music. They're sending your friend, Kendal, that we're always hearing about, to Harbin instead. This place you're going to—a kind of lonesome for your wife, but anyway she'll have you at home. Guess she's resented the travel a little lately. Well, you'd better get off as soon as you can."

And Stephen, knowing he and Hester would need Kin in a new town, was glad Hester had said nothing about dismissing him.

GUARD HUNTED IN DEER ISLAND DOPE PROBE

Three men, one described as a former guard, were sought by federal agents today as principals in the dope smuggling plot unearthed at the Deer Island House of Correction.

Already two former inmates of the island have been arraigned and held in heavy bail on charges of violating the U. S. narcotic laws.

Cases of all five men are expected to be given to the federal grand jury this week by Assistant U. S. Attorney William T. McCarthy.

At the same time, it was learned that a number of other persons are involved, one of whom may be a woman lieutenant of a dope running ring.

Evidence disclosed by a federal narcotic agent who served time at the House of Correction as a "drunk" while he probed conditions there thus bore out forecasts of the Boston Evening American on narcotics conditions there.

FAIR HELD IN $1000

Those already charged with the federal violations are Joseph Glynn of Dorchester, who pleaded not guilty to receiving and concealing 60 grains of narcotic, and Francis N. Hurley of Dorchester, charged with conspiracy. Both are held in $1000.

According to Major George Mulcahy, master of Deer Island, the situation is now "cleaned up" and not one guard or attendant, of those involved in the "scandalous conditions" charged, is now on duty.

So far four guards have been discharged, two have resigned, and six others have been given probation, with a "last warning." Specific allegations against most of them have been for drunkenness and neglect of duty.

2 GO ON TRIAL

Indications of the continuance of the federal anti-dope drive were given more definite today as three men and a woman went on trial before Judge Peters in federal court.

The prisoners, Joseph Magnotta, Parigi Tortoro, John Murphy and Leah Nielsen are accused of conspiracy to carry on narcotic traffic.

Among those summoned, it was learned, is "Jabber" Harmon, a close friend of "Red" Sweeney who was slain in the Cosmos Club.

JUNGLE GOLD -:- By Rex Beach

Not until the dinner was over and the men were installed in canvas deck chairs with cigars lighted and with a bottle of whiskey between them did Pentecost learn much either about conditions on the plantation or about the manner of Wetzel's murder.

Then Montgomery spoke frankly, brutally, but without the slightest trace of emotion. He had lost a good many men. The Tiblier outfit had offered higher wages and many of his mozos had deserted.

He had managed thus far to hold the remainder pretty well in line but they were beginning to drink heavily.

Things were worse up the river. As for moving the crop—Montgomery shrugged. Already a number of fruit barges had been lost; the trails down river were impassable.

Bit of Luck

Morever this flood had changed the sand bars at the river's mouth and at certain tides the place was a maelstrom. Just to make matters more troublesome the estuary had lately become infested with sharks.

A hellish place!

The river itself, in spots, offered perils enough, barge crews now absolutely refused to run cargoes across the bar.

"Who started this hell raising among the help?" Steve inquired.

"A fellow named Mattern. A countryman of yours."

"Is he still in the valley?"

"What's been done about Wetzel's murder?"

"Nothing. Nothing is ever done. When a native is killed his assailant disappears for perhaps a month.

"That's usually enough. When he comes back, all is forgiven and forgotten. Charlie is the first white man to go but I fancy it will be my turn next."

"So?"

The Englishman nodded. "I've been rather fortunate so far; in fact, I had a bit of luck this very afternoon." He told what had happened.

"That's got to stop," Pentecost declared.

"You have my permission to abate the nuisance at your earliest convenience."

"How long will it take you to lay down 300,000 stems here at the river bank?" Pentecost inquired.

"With my present crew—two weeks; that is if I cut small stuff. I'm afraid the ripe fruit will be lost."

"Beginning tomorrow, work double time and pay double wages. Round up every available hand and move the matured fruit first.

"Cut every stem you can lay your hands on. The loading must be finished in a week."

Montgomery shook his head, be doubted if that was physically possible.

"How do you get it out?"

"The usual method; muleback."

"We'll change that. I notice you've got a good many thousand feet of rough lumber. Two by fours. There's plenty of standing timber handy.

Lay wooden rails and build some cars to run on 'em. That can be done quickly. Lay a tram to the close-in stuff; reserve your mules for the fruit further out.

Make every man work eighteen hours a day. Use force, if necessary. I'll be back by the time you're ready to cut."

"May I ask where you're going?"

"Up river. If Mattern is still here I'm going to kill him."

"But I say—!" Montgomery set his glass down carefully. "We're not sure that he had anything to do with Charlie's death and, after all, one can't just destroy a competitor. It isn't done, even out here."

Heavy Bullet

"Mattern and I are old compadres. I've carried a bullet of his for five years and it's getting heavy. Now I think I'll turn in."

"Right!" Montgomery rose. "Pleasant dreams. Breakfast at five."

On the evening of the second day Pentecost returned to headquarters to find the entire plantation crew engaged in laying wooden rails.

Already several miles of track had been completed and a number of crude cars had been built.

The latter were clumsy, their wooden wheels creaked abominably, nevertheless they looked serviceable.

Thus far not a bunch of fruit had been cut. Montgomery, staggering with fatigue, insisted upon showing Steve what had been accomplished, so together they inspected the job.

"Fine!" Pentecost declared. "Give your men and mules some rest tonight. It's the last they'll get."

On their way back to the bungalow the Englishman inquired curiously:

"Did you find Mattern?"

"No. He left two weeks ago.

"I talked to Saunders, the Tiblier superintendent—a decent fellow, by the way."

The men strode on a while in silence, then Steve said,

"You won't have any more labor troubles."

"Jove! That's good news."

"I'll gamble that a white man will be safe in the Motagua for a while. I settled with the fellows who killed Wetzel."

"Really?"

"Two brothers named Carranza. It was like shoot ng pigs; rather turned my stomach."

Open War

Grimly Steve told him.

"There was nothing else to do. This business depends on the safety of men like Wetzel and you.

"Saunders pointed the fellows out to me and after I settled with them I came to an understanding with the field hands.

"I told 'em where to head in. They'll be good. After this loading job is finished, I want you to bring the two Carranza families down here, kids and all.

"Give 'em good quarters and find something for the widows to do. Better build 'em a couple of nice houses while you're at it."

"Very well." The overseer spoke mechanically.

"Saunders is taking Wetzel's place."

"Good Lord! You—hired him away from Tiblier?"

"Let's say he quit and took a better job. As a matter of fact, he couldn't stomach what they've been doing. He'll begin cutting for us tomorrow."

"That means open war."

"Sure! Tiblier declared war when he sent Mattern in here. This winds up the first skirmish. In six months they'll be out of business or we will—depending some on who gets the first fruit into New Orleans.

And by the way, they've just had a little more bad luck. They won't cut for a while. Some miserable wretch sank all their fruit barges!"

"By God! You know how to fight," Montgomery said.

Pentecost smiled faintly. "There's only one way; win or lose! A draw don't get you anything!"

As if through some telepathic channel, news of the summary execution of the Wetzel slayers spread up and down the river almost overnight and it had an electrical effect upon the natives.

This Honduran general was a man to respect, he was a leader to follow. In him resided the law. His action, as swift as a thunderbolt and as merciless as doom, awakened not the slightest resentment; on the contrary every mozo secretly applauded it.

What a man!

Who but a great jefe would dare to mete out justice with his own hand? And to think that he had provided for the widows and children of his victims; pensioned them for life!

During the next four days Reggie Montgomery in his turn caught a glimpse of the man who had taken charge of the Motagua, and his admiration grew.

Pentecost, he discovered, not only talked the language of these brown men, but also he thought as they did and he had a knack of inspiring them with his own spirit.

It seemed that he could shake the laziest field hand out of his lethargy and treble his capacity for work.

He was up at dawn striding through the plantation, spurring the cutting gangs to greater speed. In a steady stream the fruit flowed to the tram road and soon it was creaking toward the river bank.

Feverish Work

Mule trains came and went over hills and swamps and streams. All day and into the night Steve drove men and beasts at a pace they had never known.

From farm to farm he went, directing the work, calling for more haste; convoys from outlying sections floundering in bogs or delayed by the swollen creeks, called for his help and he rode with them.

Here his strength and his endurance told. He was stronger than any man or mule on the job and he was resourceful.

This was work that the man enjoyed; feverish work, rough, sweaty work which called for leadership and sure direction. He was in his element; for the first time in years he felt free to let himself out.

This was a fight between man and the jungle. Hardship, fatigue, obstacles, discouragements—he revsled in them and somehow he inspired his civilian troops with the same fierce, conquering mood.

Up river, Saunders, too, had reorganized his rebels and was madly cutting and loading. Profiting by the magic of Pentecost's name, he likewise lashed his gangs to double quick

At the end of four days the fleet flotilla of barges was loaded and ready for the perilous trip downstream.

Their crews were no longer reluctant to risk that journey; every mozo on the Marchant payroll was eager to have a part in the enterprise. And why not? Here was a great general whose power was more ruthless than that of the Motagua itself.

During those four nightmare days, Steve's hiding for the fastidious Montgomery had grown to admiration. The man was the most prodigious drinker he had ever met, nevertheless, he was tireless and he kept his wits about him; he was as tough as raw-hide and rougher than shark-skin.

Beneath his superficial poise, Steve discovered a nature almost as ruthless as his own. When the fellow volunteered to join the trip down river, his services were welcomed.

(Steve and Montgomery have become fast friends. Together they plan to take the barges down the river. Will they be successful? Read tomorrow's Boston Evening American for, another chapter of the adventure serial).

N. E. MILK MEN BACK AAA

By Associated Press.

Washington, May 21—Several score dairymen from New England and other eastern states were due in the capital today to work for passage of the AAA amendments to clarify the licensing authority of teh agricultural administration.

The amendments are scheduled to reach the floor of the House Thursday.

W. P. Davis, manager of Consolidated Dairies, Boston, told AAA officials that passage of the amendments is essential now, particularly after a ruling by a United States district court judge last week holding the Boston milk licensev od.

The second farmers' "march" was said to be essentially different in character from that of last week. The dairymen, principally from Boston, New York, Vermont, New Hampshire and Connecticut, were planning no open meeting of demonstration.

It was said that they planned to devote practically all of their time to conferences with members of Congress and AAA officials.

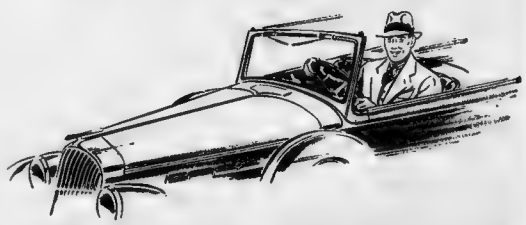
For twenty-five years I've used ATLANTIC . . . and I'll keep on using it

EVEN IF CARS GO 200 MILES AN HOUR



INSTANCES of motorists using ATLANTIC exclusively for 25 years and more are not at all uncommon. Their unwavering loyalty is a source of deep pride to this organization, as well as a responsibility to carry on the policies which make it possible.

From the earliest days of motoring, it has been our aim to furnish a motor fuel that would be better than the requirements of the moment. That was true in 1910, when automobiles were still a novelty. It was true in 1930, when ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH was first introduced. It is true today.

PLUS Performance at Regular-Gas Price

Remarkable changes have been made in automobiles during the past five years. Today's cars have far more speed, smoother performance, greater power and lower operating costs than ever before. Point by point, these improvements have been more than matched by corresponding improvements in our motor fuel. Today's ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH PLUS not only brings out all the fine qualities built into today's great cars . . . but it is good enough for the automobiles of the future!

It has enough power, for example, to take you more than 200 miles an hour . . . when cars are built to go that fast and still stay on the ground. Its anti-knock rating exceeds the requirements of most high-compression engines. Its hot-weather performance is exceptionally fine; and its all-round economy saves you money every mile you drive.

The only way to know about the PLUS performance of ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH PLUS is to experience it. Fill your tank today . . . and then give your car the hardest driving tests you can think of. You'll be surprised at what it can do.

No business can long endure without true service to its customers. We believe that ATLANTIC'S steady growth over 70 years reflects the extra quality which we constantly strive to put in our products. ° ° ° We think of ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH PLUS as something more than "just gasoline." It must definitely be the best . . . so as to meet the emergencies of life, as well as to give dependable and inexpensive service in every-day use.

BILL GRIMES on
Don't Take Those Hounds Too Seriously

(Substituting for spar-mate, Austen Lake)

Since the citizenry of this great Commonwealth cast its vote to legalize pari-mutuel betting at dog races, the crusaders have been putting the "heat" on that form of gambling, and their propaganda does not spare the whip.

Bill Grimes

Anyone laboring under the impression that he has an infallible system for beating either the horses or the dogs is sufficiently screwy to be eligible for admittance to the State Hospital for the Insane at Danvers.

On the other hand, anyone who plays an odd two dollar bill on the horses or dogs, simply to stimulate his interest in a race, will, in the long run, stumble into enough laughs to offset the losses, especially at the hound tracks.

While in New Orleans with the Red Sox a few years ago, I was about a three-a-week visitor to the dog track, and, although I cannot recall more than three or four occasions at the pay off window, I had enough fun watching those hounds come up with the unexpected to overlook the few odd "deuces" I contributed to the cause.

* * *

One night, after losing a couple of "sure shots," I went into the paddock and spotted a dog wearing a Dartmouth green sweater. Out of love for the old alma mater, I bet two dollars on that Indian from the North.

Then, Abe Savrann, who claims he followed the dogs in Russia, touted me onto a long shot, and I went for his canvas.

Abe's dope was perfect until his dog was within about 50 yards of the wire, Sor, as far as I could see, the Big Green had headed for Hanover. Anyway, he was not in sight when the rest of the field swung into the stretch.

The long shot was leading by just a length minus a short, stumpy tail, 50 yards from the finish.

At that point, the second dog, in some inconceivable manner, managed to nip the leader's tail through his muzzle, thereby precipitating one of the wildest battle royals I ever hope to see.

Within a few seconds, the entire field, with one exception, was piled up in the stretch trying to tear each other's ears off.

My Wah-Who-Wah hound was so far behind when the fight started that he did not know what it was all about and therefore had no interest in it, other than to glance casually at the milling hounds as he swung outside and flashed under the wire a winner.

On another occasion, I was down on a dog in a hurdle race. The inside dope was to the effect that he couldn't miss. But he did. And, unfortunately, I was not protected by having two dogs in this race.

This hound led all the way up to, but not over, the final hurdle, which he refused to jump, standing there while the remainder of the field went over it and under the wire.

* * *

The Dog With Rabbit Ears

Another night I was the victim of a fast rabbit and a dog with rabbit ears.

In this race, the somebody who was operating the mechanical cotton-tail stepped on the gas to such an extent that when the dogs were about forty yards from the finish the rabbit had completed one lap and was rounding the turn coming into the stretch.

My dog was in the lead but he managed to hear the rabbit even above the yelping of his opponents.

Realising that the object of the chase was behind instead of in front of him, my hound swung around on a dime and doubled back up the stretch with my two bucks.

From my meagre experiences at betting on dog races, you can see that it is not good for the blood pressure to take the sport too seriously.

Just lay the odd two dollars on the line. If you lose, charge it up to entertainment, of which there is aplenty at all dog tracks.

If "Singing Sam" Breadon, owner of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, had just a dash of George V. Brown's ingenuity, he'd concede to the salary demands of his striking bartenders, ticket takers and ushers with the proviso that his dissatisfied help wear pocketless uniforms.

The pickings at Sportsman's Park are slim, but the mere thought that the cunning of sleight-of-hand experts would be necessary to earn an honest day's pay would be sufficient to cause the strikers to waive all demands for salary increases.

Triple Tie for W. G. A. Individual Honors

With only one more W. G. A. district team match to be played, Laura Robbins, Midland, Mrs. G. P. Buell, Middlesex, and Mary Slattery, Midland, are tied for individual honors with 87 points. Each has won eight of her nine matches.

Miss Robbins, who, like Miss Slattery, is a newcomer to first team competition, went through eight straight matches without a defeat, but yesterday she was obliged to bow to Mrs. Harry Dodge at Pine Brook Valley, losing by a 3 to 2 margin when, while putting for a win, she knocked her opponent's ball into the cup.

Mrs. Buell's lone setback was at Belmont Springs in the fourth match, when she was beaten 3 and 2 by Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., The Country Club.

Miss Slattery had the misfortune to be pitted against Margaret Comins during the eighth match at Concord, which is Miss Comins' home course. As a result the Woodland player was on the short end of a 2 and 1 encounter.

Sox Going Down Unless Outfield Hits

After losing three in a row, Manager Joe Cronin was not in the best of spirits inwardly during the Friendship Dinner tendered him at the Copley Plaza Hotel, but he managed to keep his real feelings to himself.

Up to the present, Cronin has been endeavoring to pilot a one-winged Red Sox machine. He is badly in need of outfield strength. Although the Sox have five outer gardeners, three of them are "tourists."

Roy Johnson and Mel Almada are in the .300 class but Lem Solters is hitting less than .250, Carl Reynolds is in the light-heavy weight class, and Dusty Cook has not come through with a "blow" this season.

Johnson and Almada average .330 but the average of Solters, Reynolds and Cooke is .136.

With such a pronounced lack of offensive strength, Cronin will not be able to keep his Red Sox in the first division.

MACK Trades Two FOR ONE

Philadelphia, May 21 (AP)—Connie Mack today announced that Merritt "Sugar" Cain, pitcher, and Ed Coleman, outfielder, have been traded to the St. Louis Browns for George Blaeholder, pitcher.

"This is a straight trade," the manager of the Athletics said, "and I expect to pitch Blaeholder tomorrow."

Cain came to the Athletics in 1930 from Carrollton, Ga. Coleman came to the team in 1931 from Portland of the Pacific Coast League.

GROVE ROUNDING INTO '33 FORM

By Joe Cashman

Robert Moses Grove is looking better in every start. Not even the most disappointing offensive showing of our Red Sox this season could dim the lustre of the veteran southpaw's performance in the opener of the series with Cleveland.

It was the first time since coming here from the A's that he looked his old self at Fenway Park.

With a little luck he wouldn't have been scored on. One of the two runs he was found for was manufactured without a hit.

The other was due to his own and only bad pitch of the tilt, an outside ball to Hal Trotsky, which shot past third base while the Red Sox supporting cast was bunched over to the right, playing the enemy slugger to pull.

Only four hits in all were gleaned off Mose, and all of those came in the first four innings. For the next four frames he permitted only one ball to be hit to the outfield.

Better than what he did was the way he did it. He was his old confident self out there on the peak.

Last year he always wore a look of dejection and gave the impression that he feared the worst sooner or later.

Watching him against the Indians, you saw again the Grove who bore down after heart-breaking mental snapped at umpires' decisions and had supreme faith in his ability to handle every situation.

Just the breeze from his fast ball almost blew the bats out of the Indians' hands. Then when he got them with one foot free, he'd toss a hook off the corner farthest from them, which they'd either miss or pop up.

His control was magnificent. Two walks on pitches that didn't miss the strike area by a whisker's breadth and that one bad ball to Averill were the only flaws.

Nothing that resembled a pitch into the dirt or over the batter's head left his duke.

And, best of all, his showing can't be dimmed by the report that the Indians are helpless against southpaw pitching of any sort.

For after Mose was taken out for a pinch hitter in the eighth, Rube Walberg, far from the softest touch among the portsiders brigade, relieved him.

And what the visitors did to Reuben was too bad. Almost before the change had been announced, they pounded out three ringing hits for two runs.

No, sir, with seven right-handed batters, the jolly Johnson crew is no picnic for any pitcher, right or left.

And our Mr. Grove stood them on their collective heads.

It seems to us that he can't miss winning a flock of games this season if his mates ever snap out of their batting doldrums.

In every inning they made a hit off Oral Hildebrand. For three they had him hanging on the ropes. But nobody could supply the finishing punch. Once the bases were loaded with only one out. Result—No runs.

They finished up with a home run, triple, double, six singles and four bases on balls to their credit, and all they could make it spell was one run and 12 runners stranded on the sacks.

BRAVES Play Second WITH CUBS

Chicago, May 21—Tex Carleton, who never loses to the Braves, was the Chicago Cubs mound choice in the second game of the series here this afternoon. It was Fred Frankhouse's turn for the Tribe.

The Bostonians had no better luck against the Cubs in the opener here than they did back in the East recently.

Young Bill Lee pitched, and blanked the Warriors, 5-0. They got only six hits off the youngster, and, as usual, Ruth went hitless.

In fact, the one-time Yankee great is batting only for .155, having gotten only seven hits in 45 times at bat this season. With Berger out of the lineup, the club lacks a punch at bat.

Ed Brandt pitched the opener for the Braves and was combed for three runs in the second and two in the third. Bobby Smith finished up and allowed only three hits in five innings.

Phil Cavaretta and Bill Jurges led the Cubs in hitting with three apiece. Urbanski, with two hits, was the only Brave who could do anything with Lee.

U. S. DOUBLE Team in 3rd Round

Paris, May 21 (AP)—The American doubles team of Wilmer Hines and Henry Culley moved into the third round of the French hard court championship today with a 6—0, 6—2, 3—6, 9—7 victory over the French combination of Antoine Gentien and M. Bonte.

Hines, former captain of the University of North Carolina tennis team and Culley, a Santa Barbara, Cal., youngster now living in Europe, started fast and ran off ten straight games before the Frenchmen could break through.

To Americans lost control in the third set and trailed 5—0 in the fourth before their shots again became effective.

HELEN Serious in COMEBACK

By Universal Service

Chicago, May 21—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody is not going to the All-England tennis tournament at Wimbledon just for the ride—she intends to make a definite bid to regain her lost laurels.

The former women's champion expressed no uncertainty in her plans when she passed here on her way from California to New York and England.

Before leaving the coast she had been a trifle doubtful as to whether she would enter at Wimbledon. Today "Queen Helen" said:

"I think that after one or two minor tournaments to take out the kinks in my play, I will be ready for Wimbledon and a try at the British title.

"Will I seek the American title again at Forest Hills? Well, naturally, that will depend a great deal upon my showing at Wimbledon and at other tournaments I may enter in the meantime.

"I hope to be able to play as well as ever, but the tournaments will tell me pretty quickly whether my hopes are justified."

It was at Forest Hills in 1933 that the brilliant Helen, seven times national champion, was forced to default to Helen Jacobs in the finals because of an injured back.

She has been engaging in light practice for a comeback for several months, but only recently has pitted her strokes against those of top-ranking western players.

BATTLE Ends on 20th GREEN

LITTLE TOPS ERIC SMITH

St. Anne's-by-the-Sea, Eng., May 21—Bobby Knowles of Brookline, Mass., joined the group of American casualties in the British amateur golf championship here today, losing a terrific 20-hole struggle to M. P. Parkinson of England, one up.

Knowles had a one-hole edge on Parkinson after the outgoing nine, but the homebred fought desperately down the home-stretch, finished the 18 holes all even, and won the 20th with a four to Knowles' five after they drew on the 19th with threes.

Parkinson squared the match on the long 11th hole with a regulation par

T. Lawson Little of San Francisco, defending champion, looked the part of a winner today as he steam-rollered over Eric Martin Smith, 1931 champ, by a 6 and 3 margin.

Little's drives, so weak and wild in the opening match, were near perfection today, and his all around game had picked up considerably. A gallery of more than 2000 fans followed the Little-Smith conflict.

Other Americans among the victims today were John Forsman of New York, Guy Hayes of North Andover, Mass., and Robert A. Stranahan of Toledo, O.

To make up for these defections, T. Suffern Taller, Jr., of Piping Rock, L. I., and Robert Sweeney, formerly of New York and now living in London, hung up victories.

Sweeney Holds

Forsman bowed out by the count of 5 and 4 to I. Lyle of England; Hayes dropped a 2 and 1 decision to Dr. A. B MacCallum, a Briton, and Stranahan was defeated by D. Coates of Fair Haven, two up.

Sweeney, playing a belated first round mate, caught up with the field by accounting for A. Walton, 2 and 1, while Taller's advance to the third round was accomplished by one of the most topsy-turvy performances of the tournament.

The tall, sturdy American required 42 strokes for the first nine holes to reach the turn all even with Andrew Jamieson, Jr., former Scottish titleholder, and the nine shaved two strokes off par on six incoming holes to triumph 4 and 3.

Taller's opponent in the third round tomorrow will be the able and dangerous Eric Fiddian, former British Walker Cup player and finalist in this championship in 1932.

Upsetter Out

Harvey Shaffer of New York and Richard M. Chapman and Dan R. Topping, both of Greenwich, Ct., who complete the surviving Americans, are not scheduled to play until tomorrow.

J. H. Bryant, the 22-year-old "unknown," who contributed a major upset yesterday in defeating Jack McLean, the second betting favorite, was subdued by one of the tournament in the second round by W. Fraser Lee of Stockport on the 19th hole.

WOMEN Want to Ride

Agua Caliente, Mex., May 21 (AP)—Hilda Hauser, Encinitas, Calif., wants to be a licensed jockey and Lindy Steward, his horse trainer's license and owner of a string at the course, plans to apply for a jockey's permit if Miss Hauser is allowed to ride.

Braddock

May Surprise, Says Carnera

Springfield, Mo., May 21 (AP)—Primo Carnera predicts he will return to the title heavyweight championship.

Vowing he "wouldn't be surprised" if Jim Braddock beats Max Baer and that he would sidetrack Joe Louis next month, the 268-pounder said that would provide the build-up so "me and Braddock could have a good fight in September."

HIGHEST POINT, IN 6TH, WILSON'S BEST BET

Par Value Is Top Choice in First

By Dave Wilson
(Selections Made for Fast Track)
BEST BET—Highest Point, 6th Race

Rockingham Park, May 21—Highest Point, J. U. Gratton's good plater, stands out like the proverbial sore thumb in the one mile of the sixth stanza here tomorrow afternoon.

Will Irvine's charge turned in a corking second to Legender in a swiftly run mile only a few days back and apparently has only to duplicate that performance in order to grace the winner's circle.

FIRST RACE—MASKED GAL, LIGHT WEIGHT, SPEAR

MASKED GAL, third to Miss Bam at Jamaica, raced well enough that day to handle a weak field of this sort. LIGHT WEIGHT, an improving colt from the W. H. Gallagher barn, displayed high speed in better company last trip. SPEAR is the clocker's tip. Breezed five furlongs in 1 02 for a final. He may take it all.

SECOND RACE—PAR VALUE, BRIDE ELECT, OGLE

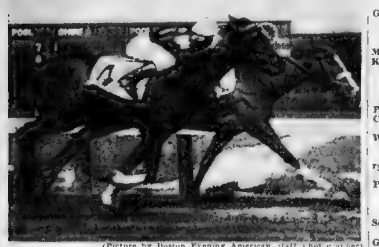
This is the toughest race on the card. My advice is to go slow on wagering. Those of a speculative nature may do well in stringing along with PAR VALUE. The latter is endowed with a smattering of class and was a bang-up fourth to Wesley Junior last trip. BRIDE ELECT, weak legged and speedy, placed to Chick Fiver last time. She looms all dangerous off that effort. OGLE is the class of the race. He may take it all if the distance is not too short.

THIRD RACE—POSTSCRIPT, CHINESE EMPRESS, ACCOLADE

Stringing along with the Jersey stable's POSTSCRIPT in this event. The Polymelian mare was never in finer fettle according to the clockers. The charts attest th her good Maryland form. CHINESE EMPRESS, fourth to Bachelor Dinner, is dropping down a few pegs and she figures to be the sternest sort of a contender. ACCOLADE is heaps better than his last effort.

FOURTH RACE—CARISBROOKE, BACHELOR'S DINNER, STAR PORTER

Casting my vote in favor of CARISBROOKE in this wide-open affair. The Pike colorbearer cut out a dazzling pace in the speed handicap on opening day and did not weaken until a few yards from the wire.



(Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer)

Flaxen holding off last strides rush of Annarita to win the sixth at Rockingham.

The distance will be in his favor. BACHELOR'S DINNER, a highly recorded Vanderbilt colorbearer, is in under a feather of 93 pounds. The Pompey colt appears to have better than a fighting chance off his corking victory of only a few days back.

FIFTH RACE—ALADDIN'S DREAM, FOUR SPOT, HOOPS

ALADDIN'S DREAM benefited better once during the Jamaica meeting. The distance is right down his alley and looks to be a question of only a smooth ride. FOUR SPOT, a clever Maryland victor, failed to run to form in his debut. This one is capable of better things. HOOPS, the hottest kind of a paddock trip last trip, may show to better advantage.

SIXTH RACE—HIGHEST POINT, BIG SHOW, CRYSTAL PRINCE

HIGHEST POINT will have BIG SHOW to down for major honors. The latter turned in a corking second to Ballos last out at Jamaica. CRYSTAL PRINCE, a bad-legged old fellow with a smattering of class, drubbed cheaper ones last time. He may be under rated.

SEVENTH RACE—SOUND MONEY, PASS, AVENTEA

It's a mighty close fit between SOUND MONEY and PASS in this affair. However, I'm going to tempt fate by rating the former as the winner. The Coburn mare drubbed Pass, Dere and other fair hides on opening day. Eyeing Dere came right back to gallop to an easy victory. PASS was never out of a pull in winning that last start. No telling just how good he is right now. AVENTEA was favored over the top one last trip, but finished far back in the ruck after forcing the pace. He may show to better advantage.

EIGHTH RACE—STEUBROTHER, CHIEF A, BRIGHT BIRD

STEPBROTHER is a sharp animal at present. The Hamilton colorbearer was a corking third to gulu Lad and Lovito in a swiftly run dash last trip. In front of that he drubbed Pass and other good ones in a route test. CHIEF A, sharpened up in sprints, is strictly the one to fear. BRIGHT BIRD for the remainder.

California's intercollegiate track and field championships were held at Stanford recently. Here is the final of the 120-yard high hurdles. This race was won by Klopstock of Stanford with Cope of U. S. C. second and Moore of California, third. Staley, also of U. S. C., finished fourth.

HAKANSON Huskies' BEST BET

Northeastern University's "dark horse" entry in the New England I. C. A. A. meet this coming Friday and Saturday at Portland, Me., is very likely to be Allan Hakanson, blonde triple-threat gridder.

A member of the time-breaking Husky relay quartet this past winter, Allan confined his running to his relay specialty and one other event.

This spring, however, he has been trying all the running events, and has developed into a consistent high-scorer.

Last Saturday, when the Parson-Zeller outfit swamped Springfield College, Allan captured the 120-high hurdles, the 220-yard dash, and then took second place in the 220-low hurdles and the 100-yard dash, for a total of 16 points, the highest individual score.

Dick Ellis, relay mate, romped home in the lead in the 440 and 880, second in the 220; third in the 440 and 220-low.

Captain Roger Hadley once again piled up three high marks in winning the shotput, javelin throw and discus.

Garfield Show

The Garfield A. A. powers today decided to operate what probably will be the final presentation of a long series of amateur boxing tournaments at the new Walkathon Arena, Revere, Friday night next.

By way of variety, there will be no novice class and no competition in the 135-pounds division.

The classes Friday will be the 118, 126, 14 7and 160-pounds group, all open.

Cavalcade Assigned Top Weight

By The Associated Press.

Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade, champion three-year-old of 1934, has been assigned the top weight of 127 pounds for the one and one-quarter miles of the $10,000 added suburban handicap at Belmont Park, May 30.

Although Trainer Bob Smith originally announced Cavalcade would not make his first start of the year until the $25,000 race at Detroit late in June, he is seriously considering sending the champion out for the suburban. A mile and one-quarter in 2.03 3-5 last week indicated that he is ready.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery is next in line with 123 pounds, four less than he carried in the Metropolitan Mile Saturday. King Saxon, winner of the Metropolitan, has 119 pounds assigned, only one more than he carried to victory in that event. Ladysman gets in 114, the same weight he carried last year when he nosed out Equipoise, packing the top impost of 134 pounds.

If William Woodward decides to send Omaha, current three-year-old king, out for the historic race, the son of Gallant Fox will pick up 110 pounds, two above his scale weight.

Your entry must reach the "Daily Double" Handicap Game Editor of the Boston American, P. O. Box 1946, or deliver to 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, not later than 1 P. M., Wednesday, May 22

Here are the Rules:

To play the "Daily Double" Game name the horses you think will win the first and third races at Rockingham. Then place the names of the horses you believe will run second and third in each of the two races.

Tickets to the Rockingham Races will be given each day to winners.

Winners will be picked under the following rules:

Entries that pick the "Daily Double" will be given first consideration. Should there be fewer "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, winners of the remaining tickets will be scored as follows: First counts 8 points, second counts 4 points and third counts 2 points in each of the two races. The entries scoring the largest number of points will be declared the winners.

In the event there are more "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, the prizes will be given to the "Daily Double" winners who score the largest number of points in selecting the horses that run second and third in the first and third races. In scoring these winners the following rules will be observed: Place counts 4 points and show 2 points for each race. Tied contestants will each receive a ticket.

In the event any of the horses you pick are scratched, the next horse will be automatically moved up one space on your list. For example, should your first choice fail to start, the second horse named becomes your first choice and the third horse your second choice.

Except where horses are scratched, your selections must run in the order in which you list them on your entry blank in order to be counted. ONLY THE NAME OF ONE HORSE MAY BE SELECTED WHERE THE HORSES ARE COUPLED IN BETTING, AS IN ENTRIES AND FIELDS. The decision of the judges will be final and no entries returned.

A coupon for Thursday's "Daily Double" selections will be printed Wednesday.

Each day's winners will be printed in all editions of the Boston Evening American the day after the races are run (Saturday's winners in Monday's editions).

Mr. Boston Letter To Judge Gillen

By JACK CONWAY

Judge Daniel J. Gillen,
Court House, Boston.
Dear Judge:

First, may I wish you success as a member of the bench. Governor Curley is to be congratulated upon his nomination. As one Roxbury boy to another, I know you will more than make the grade and continue on to higher places in the law.

Mr. Boston

When I tried to stage a comeback as a skater a year ago last winter, you were one of the few persons who offered me encouragement.

You gave me a few cheers even after I went skyrocketing in the air and landed with a crash on both knees while trying to skate on Jamaica Pond. I confess I didn't take your advice to continue skating.

I have entrenched until October at Bull Rush Farm, North Scituate. Of course you know all about the Biblical story of Moses and the Bull Rushes. That's how the place got its name.

There are some 30 acres which give ample space for the various young Bostons to do their stuff without too much annoyance to the neighbors.

They are now at a stage in their happy young lives where they are more interested in playing baseball than anything else. They would rather be a Joe Cronin or a Billy Werber than President.

Thirty acres of land enabled them to lay out a baseball field, and I found myself pitching in a Sunday afternoon ball game.

* * *

CHANGE OF PACE

AS A pitcher, I got by all right. This was probably due to the fact my fastest ball was the slowest ball the youngsters ever saw.

They almost broke their backs swinging at it. My pitching was the only bright side of the picture.

I made the mistake of thinking I was a great base runner after I clouted the apple into a pear orchard. My wind was rather poor as I jogged toward home.

One of the little Bostons was covering home. I considered sliding into the plate, but on second thought decided such an act was not only unnecessary but rather dangerous. So I made a final leap for the plate while standing up.

The throw home was even with me. The old arate landed on the side of my head with crushing effect. For a minute I thought somebody had pushed the sun out of view and had dotted the sky with stars.

I was consoled with the advice that if I had slid into the plate I would not have been hit.

Getting hit on the head had some scientific advantages. I am now able to state that one suffers more real pain when kicked in the face by a heavyweight wrestler than when socked on the beam by a baseball thrown from the outfield.

"Bull" Curry once caressed my face with one of his boots as I smacked away at my portable typewriter during a wrestling bout at the Arena.

I still believe I suffered greater pain when I crashed to the ice on Jamaica Pond than I did when kicked by "Bull" or when hit on the head by a baseball.

* * *

CASE OF RUTH

I NOW can understand how Babe Ruth feels when he reaches the seventh inning of a ball game. He is a bit weary, and the coolness of the shower is much more appealing than his spot in the sun field.

When I first knew the Babe, we would race around the ball field. We both had plenty of wim and vigor. I can remember when I could outrun any ball player on the Red Sox.

A dozen of us would start from the ball park and run back to the hotel, and I was usually first home. And to think that now I cannot get away from a throw from the outfield.

The mishap at Bull Rush Farm, Judge, didn't send me to the showers. I carried on nobly, and crashed out a few more hits. My fast ball became even slower, and the opposition was swinging at it before it was half way to the plate.

* * *

I WAS glad to see "Lefty" Grove pitch such a fine game for the Sox against Cleveland. "Lefty" has also been trying to develop a change of pace. When at his peak with the athletics, he merely threw a fast ball. He didn't even bother with a curve.

When Grove's arm began to give him trouble, he couldn't use speed. He was without a curve or a slow ball, and that is why he was hit so hard. "Lefty" says he is all right once more, and he certainly pitched a convincing argument against Cleveland.

Yours for success.

Wellesley at Woodland.

By Bill Grimes

Other than Winchester, which is topping the pack, the "double-oos" have run into tough sledding this spring in the Boston Four-Ball League, for Wollaston, Wellesley, Weston and Woodland are all in the second division, piled on top of the unfortunate Oakley aggregation.

Wollaston's Montclair Mountaineers can crash into the headlines by taking Winchester over the jumps this afternoon in the fifth weekly Boston Four-Ball League match.

The Country Club, which is in the runner-up berth, and the third place Charles River Country Club team have the softest assignments this afternoon. The Clyde Parkers are at home with Oakley, a team which has averaged only five points per match this season.

Under the supervision of Rayner M. Gardiner, former M. G. A. president, The Country Club has taken on a new lease of life and unquestionably will move into first place at the conclusion of today's matches.

Going into the fifth round, The Country Club is trailing Winchester by but one point, and should beat Oakley by a far wider margin than Winchester beats Wollaston.

LOWELL Nine Plays at CAMBRIDGE

The C. M. A. C. team of Lowell, which started its climb in the Boston Twilight League race by beating the Jefferson Club, will play the Cambridge Cubs this evening at Thorndike Field, East Cambridge.

In the other game, the Jefferson team will journey to Waltham to meet the league leading Miller Oil team at the Bike Park.

When the teams last met at Cambridge, the Miller Oiler club nicked the Jeffersons's 6 to 5, although both teams got the same number of hits.

Reilly, who beat the Jeffersons in the first start, is likely to work on the mound again. The Jeffersons hope to be the first team to set down the pacemakers, who have chalked up six straight wins.

The meeting between the Frenchmen and the Cambridge Cubs is the first between them. The Lowell outfit has some heavy sluggers, and it will take pitching strength from now on to hold them back.

Woodson, the colored first sacker, has led the Twi league often in sticking and started to go on Sunday when he clicked four for four.

Sluggers Fail to Elevate Sinking A.'s

New York, May 20 (INS)—Compilation of the day's statistics shows that in Bob Johnson and Jimmy Foxx the Philadelphia Athletics own the leading home run hitters of the two major leagues, each having nine circuit clouts to his credit. Further, Johnson heads the American League hitters with a batting mark of .400, being trailed by his teammate, Foxx, who shows a figure of .391.

Despite the fact that these two sluggers perform in Athletic uniforms, the Quakers find themselves in seventh place in the league standing. How come? The answer, poor pitching.

Wanna Buy a Horse?

Press Cop Got One For $50 Eddie Record Also in Blue

By Walter Kiley

Rockingham Park, N. H., May 21—Dawn is just streaking across the morning sky. Dim stirrings from the stables regions, ghostly figures of horses and humans, and a new race day has started.

Around the oval speeds a phantom. From a distance it appears eerie. Closer too it becomes a clever stepping thoroughbred. A rider perches atop his back.

But no one seems to know either horse or jockey

Inquiry proves it to be a three-year-old bay gelding, Bay Streak, by name, a son of Spanish Prince II, well known stake horse of other days.

His owner leans over the rail with stopwatch in hand. Imagine the surprise when he turns out to be Earle Gallup, custodian of the Rockingham press box.

And then the story leaks out.

Couldn't Meet His Grain Bill

Bay Streak had belonged to the Dahl Stable, whose owner could not meet his grain bill obligations last fall.

Gallup, who lives nearby at Salem, N. H., paid off the mortgage and got the horse. Bought it for less than fifty dollars and realized a lifelong ambition.

Throughout the winter, Gay Streak, which has never run a race, was fed well and bedded. He filled out and began to look like a runner.

Every morning at the crack of dawn, Gallup, his sons, Earle H., Jr., and Warren H. and two Great Dane mastiffs make a ritual procession to the Rockingham oval where the beast has his workout.

Similar cases of horses left behind at the end of a meeting are legendary around a race track. Frank Burke, the Salem grain and hay merchant, took over Juniority, Serenabit, Odie Goodman and Dangerous Goin last fall. Chester Young got Takeoff and William Croft picked up another for a song. Juniority is no maiden. He was a long shot winner, paying $120 to win two years ago.

Familiar faces at a race track.

On one end of the press row stands Gallup in complete command, guarding the sacred precincts of the fourth estate.

On the other end is Eddie Record, a tall handsome, military figure, of keen and kindly eye.

Record will be remembered as the first man to knock Jack Sharkey sprawling on the flat of his back.

Handed Sharkey One of Few Defeats

The former world champion was saved from a knockout only by the bell. The fight took place at the old Grand Opera House in 1924.

Jack came back in the ninth. But it was Record's fight. He got the decision and Sharkey lost one of the few fights of his notable career.

The same Record who beat Battling Levinsky in 1919 and then Sharkey, two of his 87 victims in 107 fights, looks fit to go in and polish off the best of the present crop of heavyweights today

"I have never missed a day of training in my life," the former champion of Canada reports.

"I work even harder now than in my active days. I don't drink or smoke, and I feel that I could step in and give a pretty fair account of myself despite my 55 years."

He looks as though he could. Beautifully set up, glowing with health. And nary a souvenir to mar his clean cut features.

TRAINING Greyhounds AN ART

HANDSCHOOLED AT FIRST

(This is the second of a series of articles on racing greyhounds, which soon will be staging their thrilling performances at the new Wonderland track, Revere.)

TRAINING THE GREYHOUND

By Sam Cohen

The greyhound innately is a gamboling, racing merrymaker. He is happiest when at large and permitted to run free.

He will chase any moving object, though it may only be a bit of paper whisked over the ground by a gust of wind.

The dogs, before they become trained speedsters on a track, must attain the age of 15 months. Some breeders wait until 18 months before starting the preliminary racing training.

First the greyhounds are handschooled, which gives them their first taste of real racing.

Several of the novices are held in line by trainers in some large open area. Then, at the sight of a piece of white cloth tugged through the grass, they are released.

This practice is continued daily, together with five-mile walks, until the canine's physical condition is perfect.

When the dog's racing weight is established, he is given his box schooling. This constitutes placing the racer in the official starting boxes out of which he is released to chase the mechanical rabbit in the official races.

This is where he puts on full steam and given an opportunity to demonstrate his racing qualifications.

The greyhound's weight is filed with the state commission as well as with the officials at the track where he will run. This weight is carefully checked and plays an important part in the entire racing structure.

Officials permit only one and one-half pounds allowance either side of the registered weight of the dog. This is done to frustrate any attempt at fraud.

If the dog is under weight, he usually is ill. If over weight, he is not in fit condition to race and apparently needs more training.

A greyhound which may become popular with the racing enthusiasts is compelled under the rigid restrictions to be in the best of condition.

A. marathon, will also be featured, as will other track and swimming stars, among whom will be Helen McIntyre, Elinor Weene, Lillian Davis, Roberts Winston, Dot Lyford, Ollie Heenfus, Josephine Lally, Frances Ivas, Millie Toomey, Margaret Lynch, John Mesney, Harry VanHam and Paul Snyder.

DANNO AIR STUDENT

Schooldays are here again for heavyweight wrestler O'Mahoney, who meets Gus Sonnenberg in the Garden Friday night. Danno, in Boston at the end of a flight from St. Louis, gets a lesson on aircraft from Swanson, typical great pilot of the commercial airlanes.

TODAY A YEAR AGO: Francis Ouimet eliminated by Gus Moreland; Max Marston and Chandler Egan also beaten in first round of British Amateur Golf Open.

THREE YEARS AGO: U. S. women's golf team beat British, 5½ to 3½, despite setbacks in singles for Glenna Collett Vare, Maureen Orcutt and Helen Hicks.

FIVE YEARS AGO: Babe Ruth hit three homers off Ernshaw and Grove of Athletics, bringing season's total to 9.

EX-HOCKEY Star Elected

Toronto May 21 (AP)—Hugh Plaxton, barrister, a star on the Toronto varsity grads team which won the 1928 Olympic hockey championship, has been named official Liberal candidate to contest the next federal election in the new trinity riding.

Plaxton, a member of the Montreal Maroons of the National Hockey League at one time, won a majority over three rivals on the first ballot at a convention here last night.

GUS, DANNO Prime Selves FOR FRIDAY GO

By Jack Conway

Gus Sonnenberg and Dan O'Mahoney are both on the scene of the contest and doing their final training for their finish mat battle at the Garden on Friday night.

Sonnenberg came here following a strenuous campaign in Canada, where he won three bouts. The Dynamiter is in splendid condition, and confident he will blast O'Mahoney and his "Irish Whip" out of the wrestling picture.

O'Mahoney returned to Boston today, following a mat appearance in Montreal. He previously showed on the Pacific Coast and Middle West.

Danno is in the semi-finals in the International wrestling tournament in Los Angeles. The Irish champion proved a sensation in his tussles on the Coast. He is considered the leading rival for Chief Little Wolf, who is the top card in Los Angeles.

The last legal obstacle to the O'Mahoney-Sonnenberg bout was cleared away when Alex MacLean came to an agreement with Sonnenberg.

MacLean agreed to permit Gus to wrestle O'Mahoney when the former champion agreed to post $5000 in cash and sign a contract for three bouts. These matches will depend upon Sonnenberg winning from O'Mahoney

Sonnenberg consented to allow MacLean to name the opponents for the three bouts called for by the contract. Gus will forfeit the $5000 if he fails to live up to his agreement.

KING Saxon May RACE HERE

Rockingham Park, N. H., May 21—Hope was held out here today that the great King Saxon will be a starter in the $10,000 added Memorial Day Handicap.

Beaten only once over a two-year stretch, undefeated in five 1935 starts, and ranked by many as the greatest performer of this day and age, the Pat Knebelkamp-owned thoroughbred would lend the last touch of distinction to an event which already shapes up as the outstanding race of the early season.

His owner's decision rests on the result of a veterinarian's test which is to be made at Belmont Park today

A wealthy horseman who makes his money in the oils, is said to have taken an option on King Saxon previous to his great victory over Singing Wood and Discovery in the Metropolitan handicap at Belmont last Saturday.

The sale depends on the results of the examination. If it does go through, the King will exchange hands for a sum said to be $40,000.

In the meanwhile Owner Knebelkamp has sent on for nomination papers for the big Rockingham stake event.

Crouching White Thing Sends Girl Into Frenzy of Fear

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Step up, boys and girls, and meet the newest club member—Mary H. Ramsay, of 1523 East 16th street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mary had a scare eight years ago that she hasn't forgotten to this day. And you'd have been scared, too, if you woke up in the middle of the night, out of a sound sleep, and saw what Mary did.

Mary was living in Floral Park, L. I., when all this happened. It was a hot night in August, and quite a crowd of people were staying overnight at the Ramsay home. Mary and her older sister had given up their bedroom to guests, and were sleeping on a day bed in the living room.

Ordinarily, neither of those girls would have thought anything of sleeping in the living room, but earlier that evening, Mary's two youngest sisters had complained about a man peeping in the windows, and with that thought in their minds, neither Mary nor her older sister relished the idea of sleeping alone on the lower floor while their mother and all the men of the family stayed upstairs.

The night had been hot, and it got hotter as time wore on. And what with the heat, and the excitement over the Peeping Tom, the two girls tossed restlessly for quite a spell. Finally, however, Mary's sister went to sleep, and a short time later, Mary herself dropped off.

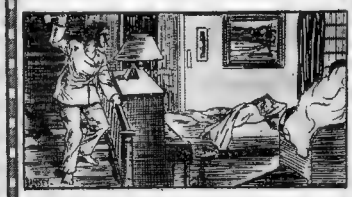
But Mary's sleep was light and troubled. After a while, she awoke. The Fates never intended Mary should have any rest that night.

When Mary awakened, it was with a curious sort of feeling—a feeling there was someone in the room who had not been there when she went to sleep. She opened her eyes, and the first thing they fell on was a shapeless figure in the middle of the room.

It was covered with a white sheet—or so it seemed to Mary—and it didn't move—just crouched there, motionless. And although Mary couldn't get a clear view of the thing in the darkness, it seemed as if it were staring at her, out of eyes she couldn't see.

Fascinated, Mary stared back at the thing, her heart filling with a nameless dread. Then, as she watched it, IT DID MOVE.

It moved with a soft, rustling sound—moved slowly, squirmingly, without stirring from its tracks. A cold chill ran through Mary's body. She lay quite still, her heart pounding like a hammer, trying to clear her brain—trying to think of some way to summon help without letting that "spectre" thing know what she was up to.



She started to nudge her sister. Her sister stirred and groaned. "Let me alone, will you?" she pleaded.

"Come upstairs with me," said Mary. But her sister had turned over and gone to sleep again.

Mary was afraid to try to wake her again—afraid the white thing would hear her. But something had to be done—done quickly, too, before the thing moved again.

Perspiration was running from every pore in her body. She was so weak with fright that she could scarcely move. But some how she managed to slip out of bed. Then, keeping her head turned in the other direction, so the white thing wouldn't know it had been seen, she made her way swiftly to the staircase that led upstairs.

Halfway upstairs, she leaned over the rail, picked up an ornamental wooden gavel from the top of the piano and threw it with all her strength at the ghostly thing in the room below. She heard something scream, and then, without waiting to see what damage she had done, she turned and fled up the stairs.

She ran into her brother's room and switched on the light. He had heard the scream below, and was sitting up in bed. In another second, people awakened by that same scream came running from all over the house.

Mary's brother called the police from the extension telephone in the upper hall. While the crowd upstairs was still listening to Mary's story, they heard the siren of the police car outside and trooped down the stairs to meet it.

By this time, there were lights burning downstairs, too. But when Mary got down there was no white thing in the living room. There was only her mother, in a white nightgown, who looked accusingly at Mary and said:

"I don't guess at me?"

Well, you know, Mary didn't know whether to laugh or cry. She was on the verge of hysterics while her mother explained what had happened. Her mother had found it too hot to sleep upstairs, and knowing it was always cooler in the living room, had gone down there and curled up in a big, comfortable chair. And Mary, with her mind on that Peeping Tom that had bothered them earlier in the evening, had taken her for a—well—Mary didn't know exactly what.

Luckily, Mary's mother wasn't hurt. The gavel had grazed her shoulder and given her a terrible scare, but it had done no harm that a little liniment wouldn't take care of. And Mary was mighty glad that her impulsive act hadn't turned out as badly as it might have.

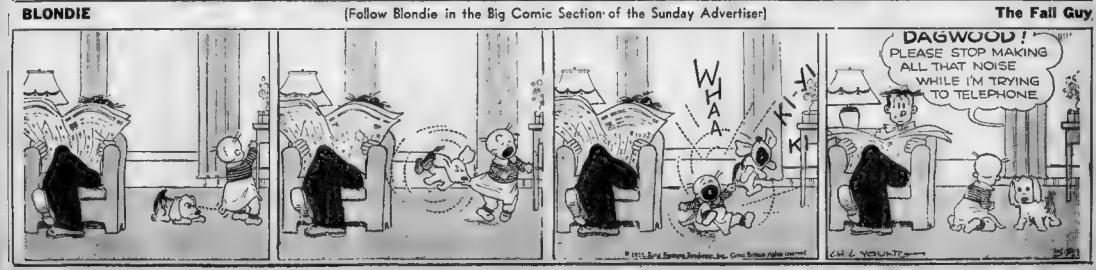
The Fall Guy



Business Leaders Disturbed

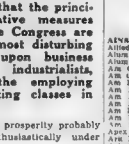
By B. C. Forbes

It is unfortunate for the rest of us that the principal legislative measures now before Congress are having a most disturbing influence upon business leaders, industrialists, bankers, the employing and investing classes in general.

But for this, prosperity probably would be enthusiastically under way.

The newspapers are recording how acutely disturbed bankers are over the bank bill, which, they claim—and rightly—would invest politicians with life-and-death powers over our banks and over all bank deposits.

Although the majority of employers favor social security legislation, they question the practicability of the present bill and are most sincerely anxious that this momentous subject be given further study and definite action postponed until next session.



B. C. Forbes

The unutility bill admittedly has stirred up a nation - wide dissension.

Now comes to the front the Wagner bill. Industry is almost unanimous in declaring that it would foment industrial strife and make labor leaders more powerful than the government itself.

This column is inundated by letters commenting on proposed legislation. Some favor further New Deal "reforms" but an increasing number have apparently concluded that the time has come for Washington to modify its "anti" activities and to give business and industry a chance to operate more freely, more energetically, more enterprisingly.

P. W. Stenzig, commenting on aliens:

"Who worked in our steel mills, mines, factories and who built the railroads, who developed our farms? Were they not foreigners?"

From a woman reader:

"What this country needs is a good old-fashioned house cleaning; open up the dark places and let in the sunlight; exterminate the vermin that infest our land; hang up the Senators and Congressmen on the clothesline for a good airing, and clean things out in general."

This from J. R. Moody:

"Like all reactionaries, you look back, never ahead. I challenge you to give a solution of the unemployment problem."

The answer briefly is: "Suspend further political troublestirring and give the country a chance to show its recuperative powers."

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

LAWRENCE SHAW NATIONAL DIRECTOR

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

Praise is still being heaped upon the shoulders of youthful Vincent (Peewee) Juskiewicz of Northampton as a result of flying the colors of the University of Vermont to second place in the recent inter-collegiate air meet in his home city.

Passing his flying tests at Boston airport a little more than a week ago to become one of the youngest aviators in the country, he returned to Northampton to literally "fly rings" around all but one of the competitors in the tournament at LaFleur airport.

He took first place in one event and found that there is no obstacle for a total score of 7. He used a borrowed plane of scarcely more than 40 horsepower to accomplish his feat.

His flying was exceeded only by that of Richard King, son of Stanley King of Amherst College, who amassed 33 points for his alma mater by winning the spot landing and fourth dropping contests and placing second in the balloon straddling event, which was won by Juskiewicz.

Randall Barton, son of Bruce Barton, added two more points to Amherst's total when he placed third in the spot landing contest. King flew a Taylor Cub.

The final standings gave Amherst first place, University of Vermont second, Harvard third and Brown fourth.

More than 40 planes were present at the meet. George Mason of Boston was official announcer, William E. Heaton, State aeronautical inspector, acted as referee.

Timers were Alfred Lumley and Lumley, track coach at Amherst; Ferguson Jansen of the Fall River Shipbuilding and Daniel D. Strohmeier of Boston.

"Johnny" Shobe, Boston pilot, flew to the meet with Harvard, Harvard students, and Captain W. H. Wincapaw of Boston flew up with his plane. Wincapaw, Jr., is one who expects to qualify soon as the youngest pilot in the State.

EAGLE BAR Proves Promotion

An Eagle bar attached to the Junior Birdmen wings tells the world that above is a girl or boy not only an active member, but one who has passed an examination that would stump many adults.

When a Birdman has been a member three months, he should send one and one-half cents postage (Canada three cents) to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston, and ask for his Eagle test sheet.

CANADIAN GIRL To Seek Air Job

A Canadian girl, Vivian Laurance, is an enthusiastic Junior Birdwoman, who plans to become an aviatrix. She has written a letter to Boston headquarters and expresses the views of many other Birdwomen. Here is her letter:

"This is to acknowledge receipt of my Junior Birdmen pin and membership card. Believe me, I'm really proud to wear the pin; it shows that I am interested in the future of this country and in aviation.

"I also thank you for your prompt reply to my questions on aviation. Although you somewhat dampened my spirits as to the opportunities of women in commercial aviation I will not lose hope of entering that field some day. Maybe by the time I am ready to become an aviatrix women will be able to qualify for other positions besides that of air hostess. However, till then I shall continue to read your special page and learn all I can about aviation.

"Once again I wish you every success in the advancement of your great club and I assure you that I am glad to belong to it."

Aeronautically yours,

Vivian Laurance,

123 Noel st., New Edinburgh, Ottawa, Canada.

No Hospital Fire

A fire alarm accidentally rung at the Long Island Hospital on Long Island sent fire and police boats rushing to the scene. They were recalled by radio as soon as it was learned that there was no fire.

ALICE FAYE ON AIR AS GUEST OF BERNIE

By N. F. T.

Formerly the Rudy Vallee featured personality for so long, blonde and beauteous Alice Faye has been branching into screen and stage work aplenty of late.

This evening (WEEI) at 9 o'clock, her coast to coast broadcasting bit is to be with Ben Bernie.

It is also to be noted that this Tuesday night turn by the merry "Old Maestro" and his tune troupe, which will be aired from Catalina Island, in the Pacific, where "all the lads" are filling a six weeks' engagement. Miss Faye is making the journey to the resort island from the cameras capital of Hollywood.

Oscar Straus' "Chocolate Soldier" will be presented (WEEI) this evening by the "Beauty Box Theater" group and for a second time. Meaning at 8:30 p. m. (Eastern D. S. T.) with a cast headed by Francis White, James Melton and Theodore Webb.

One more return engagement is in the wind (WAAB) tonight when Lieut. Gen. Hanford MacNider, the American Secret Agent X-9 listeners at 6.30 p. m. Songs by the vermatile little Marion Mann of Watertown are slated. Marion sang previously on the popular juvenile program and letters from members all over New England bear witness to a repeat "mike" performance. Ruth Hanson hooks forth at the piano at the Wurlitzer and Jack Leland also on hand lending his vocal chords to the X-9 theme song singing.

Governor James M. Curley of Massachusetts and Leo Lawrence, "Hired Times With 'Easy Payments'," will be the third commentator in the series of round table discussions (WNAC) as sponsored by the Consumers' committee of the national advisory council on radio in education. He will be heard by all America tonight from 10:45 to 11 p. m.

These radio talks are directed toward the "education of the economically illiterate," by those who lamentably unwisely because he does not know how to get the most in value and satisfaction for the dollar he spends.

Broadcasting of the President Roosevelt bonus bill veto message to Congress tomorrow is slated to come over several hook-ups of WBZ-WNAC-WAAB and WMEX, with the time to be between 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

WOOLEN TEXTILE

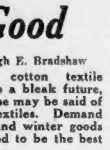
Outlook CONSIDERED

Good

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

While cotton textile mills face a bleak future, the reverse may be said of woolen textiles. Demand for fall and winter goods is reported to be the best in years.

The unusually heavy turnover in the Boston market is the first indication of the brightened outlook. The second is the sudden strength in the shares of purely woolen textile concerns.



Frank D. Comerford

American Woolen common and preferred have featured early week stock market dealings and gossip in State Street has it that strong interests have been doing the buying. . .

Observers in the Boston wool district say that taking of fleece is far from speculative and the upswing in prices has been a sound affair and there is little or no fear of the price collapse. With the season just begun and contracts for future delivery being made the mill profit picture is much more inviting than it was on spring business. Then mills booked a fair volume of business at low prices. When demand suddenly expanded they were in the unenviable position of finding it next to impossible to accept orders at higher and more profitable price levels.

* * *

State Street Jottings: From the above it is easy to see why the word is about to keep an eye on the American Woolen issues during reactions . . . Earnings reports of Edison of Boston are closely followed these days . . . The big utility handled by Frank D. Comerford turned in a creditable April . . . For the 12 months to April 30, net equal to $9.84 per share was shown . . . Compared with $9.51 in the preceding 12-month period . . . The aggressive campaign of the New Haven for passenger business is cheering . . . Stream lined train service and week-end excursions are on the summer program.

The stock market is now indulging in wishful waiting. For it built its present estate on rumors, hopes and gossipings of a bullish trend. In order to keep up appearances something must soon happen. A sidewise movement is characterized by rallies of a fitful, indolent type will prevail while wishful waiting holds the stage. It must be said of the recessions. But after the air clears of boom talk the actual performance will look like a good top.

* * *

Notes—From the look of our chart someone is inclined to dispose of Air Reduction . . . Before and during the rally in the industrials section we called attention to the barometric value of this issue . . . It has just as good a record calling tops and declines as it has in calling rallies . . . The rails, while sloppy, may find the news more to their liking a bit later in the month . . . Watch Union Pacific . . . It did fairly well last week and a continuance would be most encouraging.

DEFEND PLANS For Kelly Tire

Total cash and Goodyear common stock, which would be exchanged for the present securities of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. under a reorganization plan recently proposed by the trustees, is valued on a "going concern" basis, the company declared in a statement in opposition to the plan by a committee representing the $6 preferred stock.

The amount which would be realized through forced liquidation, the company claims, would be substantially less than that offered by the trustees' plan.

HOLLAND LITTLE McNamaras Climbing Ladder

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Thousands who have seen and applauded the little McNamara boys of Roxbury, who are the outstanding youngsters in Greater Boston's juvenile song and dance circles (in this opinion), will enjoy this news, received by telegram today:

"Kids wowed them and everyone who saw them seems to be talking about them. Warner Bros. just arranged tests Brooklyn Studio tomorrow and Gus Edwards thinks they are sensational prospects. He introduced them from Ambassador Theater stage and they stopped show as usual."

George Holland

The wire was sent by a newspaperman, an "amateur shepherd," he calls himself, who became attracted to the youngsters when they appeared at a Secret Agent X-9 show. Firm in his faith, this scribe arranged for the boys' appearance, through the good offices of Sam H. Harris, at a benefit Sunday night at the Ambassador Theater.

Picture scouts were present; the Warner Brothers acted quickly, and unless the signs are wrong, little Billy and Paul McNamara are on the brink of a career.

The yacht club in Nantucket will house two performances a week of the Beach Theater company, which plays at West Falmouth. On Monday and Tuesday the Beach Theater players will play in Nantucket and voyage back to West Falmouth for performances on the other nights of the week.

Mary Sargent, who was seen here in "No More Ladies," and who followed Lucille Watson when the star went to Hollywood in the dowager role of that successful comedy, will open at Nantucket in "Post Road." Lucille Watson is starring currently in "Post Road" in New York.

The Shuberts will use "The Family Album" as a title again. Their successful revue, "Life Begins at 8:40," started out in preparation as "The Family Album," but the title was changed. Ogden Nash is writing the book and lyrics of "The Family Album"... Ray Bolger has recovered from the slight illness which caused the cancellation of "Life Begins at 8:40" in its return engagement here.

Capsule interview: "The day is past when the public can be attracted to the theater solely by spectacular scenic production. The talking picture, with its limitless scope for effects of this kind has changed all that. More than ever before the play is the thing."—Guthrie McClintic, director-husband of Katharine Cornell.

Gordon in Cast

Huntley Gordon, for years a favorite in silent films, will appear in the cast of "Front Page Woman," Bette Davis' new starring picture for Warner Brothers, shortly to be released.

George Brent, Winifred Shaw, Roscoe Karns and June Martel are also featured in the cast.

Baby Leroy Stars in Film Based on Adoptions

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, May 21—Hollywood's adoption craze—and it's amazing in how many homes there are little children who are being brought up by film stars as their own, has given Paramount an idea.

Baby Leroy, the young man who steals every picture in which he appears, will have his first starring role in "The Baby Market," inspired by The Cradle, an institution in Evanston from which Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler, the Joe E. Browns, Gracie Allen and George Burns took the little ones they adopted.

A wonderful woman Louella O. Parsons heads this institution which cares for the foundlings in a scientific manner and prepares them for their carefully selected foster parents. Pauline Lord plays that matron. Virginia Weidler, David Holt and his sister Betty, Lois Kent and Billy Lee will compose Mister Leroy's supporting cast.

* * *

Am I surprised? Fred Stone, who was brought out here by Paramount, will do his first picture making on the RKO lot. He and Fred MacMurray were both borrowed from Paramount for Katharine Hepburn's picture, "Alice Adams." Stone plays Hepburn's father while MacMurray has the lead opposite La Hepburn, and what a break for the young man!

The cast is particularly interesting in that Anne Shoemaker, Henry Stephenson's wife, makes her screen debut. Then there is Frank Albertson. George Stevens is the director and the man who did such a swell job with "Laddie" and, of course, it's a Pandro Berman production.

* * *

The blonde English Madeline Carroll, who made more of a stir socially speaking, when she was in Hollywood than any other British actress is coming back. Walter Wanger has borrowed her from British Gaumont for one picture, and when she reaches here the fall she will be accompanied by her attractive husband, Captain Ashley.

Under contract to Wanger are Henry Fonda, whom Winfield Sheehan borrowed from Universal, Charles Boyer, Joan Bennett, Frances Langford and Peggy Conklin.

* * *

Pardon me if I make a little prophecy today. Ian Hunter, the English actor brought over by Warners, should, within the year, be tops. He was so marvelous on the "Hollywood Hotel" hour with Bette Davis in scenes from her picture, "The Girl From Tenth Avenue," that the whole town started talking about his performance.

As for Bette—well, she is getting to be a dramatic actress with few equals in the movies—better with each picture.

Rian James, well-known novelist and one-time Brooklyn columnist, will marry Ann Ondra the moment his divorce becomes final. Miss Ondra was formerly with Alexander Korda and she met Rian in London. Both of them were at the Jesse Lasky tea, admitted an engagement existed and said the wedding would take place just as soon as the prospective bridegroom is legally free. The first Mrs. James was Diana Cesday, a former Follies girl, to whom an interlocutory decree was granted on last April 15.

Snapshots of Hollywood

JANET GAYNOR suffering with a painful wisdom tooth; EDGAR ALLAN WOOLF host at one of his famous dinners with all the concoctions which are to be a part of his cook book; MADAME JERITZA and many other distinguished guests at EDGAR'S grand party; the best appetizers yet served at the huge cocktail party for PEPI LEDERER given by CAROLE LOMBARD.

WILLIAM HAINES and LLOYD PANTAGES at Bill's house; the party went on until long after the dinner hour; FRED MacMURRAY dining with the best-looking brunette, JOAN BENNETT, GENE MARKEY, BARBARA BENNETT, DOWNEY, EDMUND LOWE, members of a week-end yachting party fishing at Catalina.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE NETCHER spending her days doing over a house she bought which she intends to rent at the beach; EDDIE CANTOR getting the big welcome at the Beverly Derby. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Titled Star

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, now appearing as the benevolent Bishop Bienvenu in "Les Miserables," at Loew's State, is co-starred in the United Artists' film, "Nell Gwynn," with Anna Neagle in the title role.

Lovely Marion Davies' newest star role is in "Page Miss Glory," which has just been completed at the Cosmopolitan studios, and will soon be released in Boston.

M-G-M Plans Features

An imposing line-up of stories for screen adaptation has been released by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios for production during the coming season.

The six special films which head the Metro parade are "China Seas," with Wallace Beery, Clark Gable and Jean Harlow; "A Tale of Two Cities," starring Ronald Colman; "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh;" "Broadway Melody of 1936; William Powell in "The Great Ziegfeld," and "Wife Versus Secretary," with the cast to be announced.

Greta Garbo in "Anna Karenina," Joan Crawford in "Glitter," "After the Thin Man," with William Powell and Myrna Loy, are three of the other releases which will be completed during the summer.

Marion's Eyes, Smile Praised

Who is Hollywood's perfect dream girl?

Marion Davies' eyes and Marion Davies' smile will certainly be chosen as features of the "blended beauty," sought by one of the leading national motion picture magazines in a nation-wide contest to decide as to just what are the chief charms and characteristics of the ideal film actress.

The idea of the charm contest had its origin in the plot of "Page Miss Glory," the new Marion Davies starring picture for Cosmopolitan Productions, which will soon be released by Warner Bros.

In the current issue of Screenland Magazine the contest starts.

Will the ideal star have Jean Harlow's blonde hair, or Kay Francis' sleek, dark tresses? Garbo's eyes, or Hepburn's? Legs like Marlene Dietrich's or Dolores Del Rio's?

Of the first 4000 letters received by Screenland, a big majority favored the Davies eyes or the Davies smile.

Movie fans may now create their own composite beauty, and compete for a total of 270 prizes, topped by a first award of a new Auburn motor car.

Film Held at Fine Arts

The perennial favorite among foreign musical films, "Two Hearts in Waltz Time," will remain at the Fine Arts Theater until its American rights expire.

On June 1, all prints in this country of the delightful Viennese operetta, with its popular title song, are to be destroyed.

Willy Forst and Greti Theimer have the leading roles in the film.

The final week holdover definitely ends on Tuesday, May 28, when "Two Hearts" will be followed by the widely discussed French film version of "Camille," starring Yvonne Printemps and Pierre Fresnay.

'Official Lobby' Practices Should Not Be Allowed to Defeat Soldiers' Bonus

ONLY one thing stands in the way of the Patman Bill and immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus—the opposition of the President.

This opposition cannot be predicated upon economy.

Actually, settlement of the bonus in full will require LESS THAN HALF as much money as the Administration is now lavishing upon all kinds of undertakings, some of which are bound to prove of very dubious value.

Moreover, the bonus bill will add nothing to Federal liabilities.

It is merely the fulfillment of an acknowledged and existing obligation, to be discharged in a manner requiring neither public borrowing nor taxation.

CONGRESS wants to pay the bonus now. The decisive majorities by which the Patman Bill passed both Houses is proof of that, and there is plenty of evidence that the country would like to have the bonus paid.

Yet the President is opposed. Why?

This opposition has introduced some new and very disturbing aspects into our methods of government.

The President himself is declaiming against the soldiers' bonus and is LOBBYING against the Patman Bill.

He is bringing every political and personal influence to bear on Senators who are inclined to support the measure.

His people in the Administration are threatening and cajoling, and are using the relief funds as factors in their appeals.

Subservient Senators will get their share of the funds for their States.

Independent Senators will not.

This is not good political practice, and it is not good American precedent.

PRESIDENTS and Cabinet Officers should not lobby for their personal policies.

It is just as bad for them to lobby as for private interests to lobby. In fact, it is worse, because private interests cannot use public funds to compel compliance with their requests.

The President is now going to appear before Congress to make a personal appeal against the soldiers.

Why all this antagonism towards the soldiers?

They are good citizens who have rendered signal service. In an era of wastefulness why be penurious with the soldiers?

They have DESERVED compensation. They have been PROMISED compensation—a very small compensation for what they sacrificed.

THE nation is pledged to pay them. Why not pay them now when they need it?

Why pay others recklessly who have no claims upon the nation's gratitude?

Why pay politicians? Why pay bureaucratic parasites?

Why pay leeches and bums and even crooks?

Why not save some of the money which is wasted on the worthless and pay the worthy THEIR DUE?

Why should the Administration be hostile to those who serve, as it is hostile to those who save and strive and seek to be good, useful, successful, self-respecting citizens?

Is it wrong to defend America? Is it wrong to love America?

Is it wrong to uphold American policies and American institutions?

Must we all go Communistic along with the Tugwells and Wallaces in order to be in favor with the Administration?

Must we all think first of the foreigners, along with the Hulls and the Perkinses?

Must we give up all we have labored to secure, in principles as well as in material benefits?

Why penalize Americans for being American?

Let us hope the Senators will not listen to official lobbyists invading the halls of Congress, but will have the courage and independence to do their duty to the soldiers, to the public and to the nation.

Vandenberg's Tariff Protest

BY ACCEPTING the visionary and obsolete tariff recommendations of Secretaries Hull and Wallace, President Roosevelt has given to the political opposition an issue of immense appeal to the American people.

One by one the industries left unprotected by the tariff reductions implicit in the so-called reciprocal treaties which Mr. Hull is negotiating will rise, with their employes, to protest vigorously against the Administration.

At the moment the cotton textile industry, which has been harassed by New Deal policies, is in the foreground of public attention.

IN A VIGOROUS, thoughtful and enlightened address in the Senate, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, a Republican, has joined the issue on the tariff.

He properly berates the New Deal Administration for seeking to run simultaneously in two opposite directions.

Seeking to formulate an American tariff policy attuned to realities in the modern world, Mr. Vandenberg states major propositions:

FIRST—That the American farmer should be protected from the increasing infiltration of foreign agricultural products.

SECOND—That American industry and labor need similarly to be protected.

THIRD—That the menace of foreign competition has been heightened by the "so-called tariff bargains which are being negotiated by the State Department in sympathy with free-trade ideas of its distinguished and, I may say, lovable secretary."

FOURTH—That reliance on the export trade for a restoration of domestic prosperity is fallacious.

FIFTH—That we must develop our own relative self-containment, whether we like it or not.

SENATOR VANDENBERG has spoken effectively for the true interests of the American people.

Intelligent Democrats should join hands with patriotic Republicans in urging an external economic policy which will best suit the demonstrable needs of the home economy.

With unemployment abnormal at home, it is suicidal to create additional unemployment by admitting competitive foreign agricultural and industrial products.

We must recognize that foreign trade in the future will be selective, not general.

In no circumstances should we risk the prosperity of our internal market, which is the richest in the world, for illusory foreign markets which may well be beyond our grasp.

The Quoddy Project

New Chapter in Power

A NEW chapter will be written in the book of power as Uncle Sam proceeds to harness the tides of the Bay of Fundy.

Dexter P. Cooper, who originated the idea a decade ago, is a brother of Colonel Hugh Cooper, who was chief of the Muscle Shoals work.

The present idea is to employ him as "consultant." He says.

"Think of the thrill of taking this power all over the State! Think of the villages that can be resuscitated!"

Quoddy's possibilities offer a wide field for range of the imagination.

One is to end Maine's decline in population.

Another is the electrification of her vast farm lands.

Then there is the building up of a new port at Calais, out of which many products could be shipped at low water rates.

The Federal board that approved the project found shortage of power was a World War handicap.

"Water power developments should be started now to forestall a war-time shortage of power," says the Federal study.

The success of the Quoddy project, finally, is bound to lead to more such developments along our New England coast.

"With the Greatest of Ease"

New England Salmon

W. W. Caswell, Jr., of the Havana branch of a Boston bank, sent word recently to his friend, James Michaud at Square Lake, Me., saying he'd like a 1935 salmon.

Michaud went out and hooked a 5½-pound fish.

This was on a Monday. The salmon was taken by auto to Bangor and then by a Boston & Maine airplane to Augusta.

The next day it traveled by train to Boston. From here a succession of airplane jaunts landed it in Havana on Wednesday, where Mr. Caswell and his guests ate it.

This is an excellent example of the way the airplane is conquering distance.

And man's mastery of the air is still in its infancy. With every year seeing new and better airplanes.

America leads. In this field no air-minded youth can complain of the lack of opportunity.

Almanac of 1835

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

(Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate.)

The other day I brought home from an old bookstall a copy of "The American Almanac and Repository of Useful Knowledge for the Year 1835."

Edwin C. Hill

It is fascinating reading. With too much of today blaring in his ears, one cannot find better reading than a 100-year-old almanac.

It helps one to forget the work relief bill, Stresa and Warsaw, inflation, croopers, the Brain Trust and Huey Long.

"Hey, Mr. Eighteen-thirty-five, how are things?" Quick on the up-take, the old chap fills us in. Neap tides and moons in quadrature or right ascension are running according to form.

Leveriers hadn't yet spotted Neptune—and what a tale we could tell old 1835 about that!—but the other seven planets are behaving as usual, and folks are wondering about life on them.

Haley's comet is prowling within 22,000,000 miles of the earth. Martin Van Buren is President, and the 23rd Congress is sitting. Each senator and representative gets $8 a day.

Here are Senators Peleg Sprague of Hallowell, Maine, and Ether Shepley of Saco, Nathaniel Silsbee of Salem and Nehemiah Knight of Providence.

We also note Senators Daniel Wester of Boston, J. C. Calhoun of Pendleton and Henry Clay of Lexington.

Old 1835 doesn't seem much interested in them and wants to tell us about Representatives Job Pierson of Schaghticoke, N. Y., and Ebenezer Young of Killingly, R. I.

New York city had fourteen daily newspapers, eleven semi-weekly, thirty-three weekly, four semi-monthly and five monthly publications. The average circulation of the ten larger dailies was 1700.

The old almanac gives the average American life expectation at birth as 38.15 years. Ours is 59 years.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 21—No success of the season has been more cheering to theatrical folk than that of Grace George. She came out of retirment recently to fulfill a star role that brought a first night audience to its feet cheering. And re-established her as a portrayer of elderly roles.

O. O. McIntyre

She wrung hearts as a pathetic and tortured spinster. Miss George is especially beloved by her profession because she is among the few who proved her calling is no barrier to a happy marriage.

At 19, she was married to the bluff, fiery and capable W. A. Brady.

Convent bred and astonishingly shy, she is the exact opposite of her husband. Brady is the rough and tumble type, the man's man who takes his straight, is a terror at draw and knows how to manage prize fighters as well as build theatres and produce plays. He is now 72.

Miss George's life has been a succession of contrasting interludes—living in a theatrical trunk and making a cozy home for her husband in New York.

And in spare time devoting the hours she could to stage charities. No star's life has been a better example to her guild.

Edward Dean Sullivan, the author, has spent a year collecting data for a book about the fabulous Wilson Mizner. He found that the chief tenet of Mizner's credo was that fear sinks and torments more people than almost any other thing.

The playwright gambler once related how he conquered this deadening influence in so many lives. When 16, he ran away from home and a month later wired his mother to send him $500. She wired back:

"Sorry, I did not receive your telegram."

Mizner was naturally disappointed, but right there economic fear left him forever.

"I knew that the son of a mother that smart," he said, "was never going to starve."

A number of the younger generation belonging to the Long Island set will rough it in lodge keeper's huts at the entrances of their parents' estates this summer.

Things being what they are, many vast chateaux with idyllic names will be closed—the elder folk remaining in town.

A Good Man Tries to Be Bad

But Human Beings, Like Leopards, Don't Change Much

By SYLVIA GRACE

Two interesting writer-creatures meet in the June Cosmopolitan Magazine. Sinclair Lewis, Nobel Prize winner, writes about a good man who tries to be bad, and Rebecca West tells about Sinclair Lewis.

Of all queer things that Sinclair Lewis has imagined, the queerest is his latest character, Dr. Jay Tappan, who forgot that the leopard cannot change his spots, nor a good doctor, whose job is saving human life, become a whole-hearted murderer.

In the picture he is telephoning to Mrs. May Scaggs, whom the usually reserved Sinclair Lewis describes thus: "Her parchment-smooth cheeks had the delicate apricot hue of sun-touched snow on a late winter afternoon." Even a man who was married, and a loving father, would be affected by such a lady. You do not often find one who reminds you of an apricot.

Mrs. Scaggs' husband, nicknams "Sherm," drank heavily, told unpleasant stories, abused his children with vicious ridicule, didn't pay his bills, boasted of his unfaithfulness to his wife. On the honeymoon he had thrown a cake of soap at her and hit her in the eye.

Dr. Jay observed the lovely May Scaggs in her unmerited suffering—she clung to him as even the most faithful of wives have clung to big, strong doctors—and decided that husband "Sherm" should be put away quietly, as one might put away a group of unwanted kittens.

May was a trusting woman; "Sherm" a human termite. In Dr. Jay's place you yourself would spend some interesting evenings planning safe ways to remove him.

"I might let the operating knife slip," mused Dr. Jay, "or leave a sponge to decorate the inside of his gallstone operation."

But when the operation began, Dr. Jay forgot about his murder.

Later he thought: I might shoot "Sherm."

But he never got around to it—a doctor's life is busy, and "Sherm" kept getting sick. You couldn't shoot him except on the wing, so to speak. It wouldn't be sportsmanlike.

Sinclair Lewis knows, whether you do or not, that if you are good, it is hard to do evil. That is one advantage of virtue—it becomes a habit. Dr. Jay never did exterminate "Sherm." And when May tried to send her spouse into the next world by the arsenic route, Dr. Jay despised her as he would any other criminal, gave her up forever, and returned to placid evenings of Russian Bank with his plump wife.

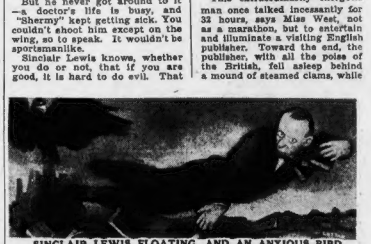
Mr. Lewis is even more interesting than his characters. In the same June issue of Cosmopolitan Rebecca West, English novelist, describes him as "The Man from Main Street," illustrated with the caricature printed here. He floats above his beloved American scene, dropping books as he floats, regarded anxiously by a large dark bird in the left hand corner.

This extraordinarily energetic man once talked incessantly for 32 hours, says Miss West, not as a marathon, but to entertain and illuminate a visiting English publisher. Toward the end, the publisher, with all the poise of the British, fell asleep behind a mound of steamed clams, while



SINCLAIR LEWIS FLOATING, AND AN ANXIOUS BIRD

Sinclair Lewis talked brightly on to a lady reporter found secreted in his hotel suite.

We recommend Mr. Lewis's story "The Hippocratic Oath," and Rebecca West's "The Man from Main Street," as intensely interesting entertainment. In the story you see what Sinclair Lewis does, in the article you see why Rebecca West thinks he does it. You may not agree with her. Read her facts, and you decide.

Growing Up

By Edgar A. Guest

One thing I know: at twelve years old
A little girl is hard to hold.
Her dolls neglected seem to say:
"Has Janet really gone away?
And who is this long-skirted maid
Who keeps the room where Janet stayed?

"Who can this haughty person be
Who enters here yet doesn't see
That weeks and weeks and weeks have fled;
Since properly we've gone to bed?
Janet would never go to rest
Until she had us all undressed.

"There is a lady here who stands
Before the mirror and her hands
Arrange with most particular care
The shimmering beauty of her hair,
Or touch with drops of scent each ear
And seems to think of naught but dress."

So sad they seem and sad am I
To see the swift years racing by.
And, like the dolls I gaze upon,
I wonder, too, where Janet's gone
But all I know: at twelve years old
A little girl is hard to hold.
